NO CHANCE TO BALLOT IS CHARGED

Whitney Manager on Witness Stand To-day Declares Democratic State Chairman Told Him in Advance Whitney Would Not Be Nominated, Calls Red Ticket Plan Unfair and Unprecedented.

That the giving of special red tickets, which were to be exchanged for credentials by delegates to the Democratic State Convention at Springfield, was a practice unfair, unprecedented and unheard of, was the testimony to-day by former Congressman McNary, a member of the State Committee, before the Ballot Law Commission, which is to decide whether Bartlett or Whitney is the legal Democratic nominee for Governor.

Cross-examined by former Attorney-General Herbert Parker, Mr. McNary declared that the committee on credentials of the convention which is on trial was composed entirely of Bartlett men, and that not a single friend of Henry M. Whitney was given a place.

"When I protested to Chairman Feeney," Mr. McNary testified, "that the whole make-up of the convention was rank and unfair to Mr. Whitney and to the delegates, who had been elected to vote for him, and that he knew that the Whitney men were in the majority, Mr. Feeney said to me:

WHITNEY WON'T BE CANDIDATE

"'There is no use in mincing matters. Whitney is not going to be a candidate and there is no use in our trying to arrange things. That is all there is to it.'

"I protested in vain to Daniel J. Kiley and to State Chairman John P. Feeney," said Congressman McNary during the course of his testimony, "that the Committee on Credentials was not appointed in fairness nor justice, and that every man on it was a Bartlett man and that Mr. Whitney had been ignored."

PLEADS FOR FAIRNESS.

"I told Mr Feeney that Mr. Whitney had a big majority of the delegates, and that he knew it. I asked him to appoint a chairman who would be fair to both sides. I even suggested myself. I told him that he knew that Daniel J. Kiley would be unfair and that he should not appoint him. It was vain. He refused to even discuss the matter with me, saying: 'Whitney is not going to be nominated. That's all there is to it.'

"Chairman Feeney even refused to issue tickets for the stage to the State Committee men, a practice in the Democratic party which goes back for many years."

Kiley Early on Hand.

Dan Kiley, who was the floor manager of the Bartlett forces at the convention, and George Fred Williams were two of the first men to appear at the commission's rooms. Herbert Parker and Malachi Jennings of the Whitney counsel and former Mayor George L. Mayberry of Waltham and Homer Albers of the Bartlett legal array were on hand early, but the commissioners were a little late, so the opening of the hearing was delayed until 10:15 o'clock, with former Congressman McNary resuming the stand.

The attendance was lighter than yesterday, and Sergeant Goodwin of Station 3 had only two policemen in the corridor, instead of the ten who were detailed there yesterday. Two officers, however, were inside the room, close to the commissioners, evidently in anticipation of possible disorder in the proceedings.

All of the prominent politicians present yesterday were on hand to-day, except Thomas W. Lawson. He was not there at the opening. Neither Henry M. Whitney nor General Bartlett, the two men most vitally concerned in the proceedings, was at the hearing. They have not been present at any time.

Quincy Joins Whitney Camp.

There was a change at the counsel table to-day, Josiah Quincy sitting beside Herbert Parker and coaching the chief counsel for the Whitney forces. Edward McClintock, a Springfield lawyer, also joined the Whitney party. On the other side, Mr. Kiley and George Fred Williams surrounded Chief Counsel Mayberry and gave him numerous suggestions.

Before the taking of testimony, Chairman Cunningham of the commission, announced that the day's session would end at 1 o'clock, and beginning Monday sessions would be held from 10 to 1 and from 2 until 4.

M'NARY IS FIRST WHITNEY WITNESS

Former Congressman McNary was examined by ex-Attorney General Parker, as the first witness. He was shown one of the credentials used at Springfield and identified it, saying all of them followed the same form, although some were on pink and some o[illegible] blue paper. He was directed to descr[illegible] how these credentials got to the dele[illegible]s. He replied:

"They are [illegible]ed by the State committee to the chairmen of the town and city committees, to be delivered by them to the caucus officers.

"What has been the custom at conventions where a contest was anticipated, relative to the exchange of credentials for a ticket?" asked Mr. Parker.

"In such a case credentials were usually issued with a stub. The delegate deposited his credential at the door and retained the

LOW RECORDS ARE BROKEN BY MANY STOCKS

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Heavy liquidation of stocks was resumed again in Wall street to-day, and nearly all the active issues made new now records. The inactive stocks were neglected, and great volumes of Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Amalgamated Copper smelters, Reading and Steel were thrown on the market. All of these stocks broke through the prices recorded in the panic of last March and in the subsequent break. Union Pacific, which had never broken under 120½, for several years declined to 118⅜. Amalgamated copper sold down to 52⅝. Smelters because of heavy selling by the insiders, broke to 75. Steel sold at 25⅝ for the common and 83¼ for the preferred. St. Paul, which William Rockefeller has been booming recently, broke to the new bottom, 114½.

O'BRIEN REPUDIATES BARTLETT TICKET

WORCESTER MANAGER OF GENERAL'S BOOM SCORES MOB RULE AT CONVENTION.

WORCESTER, Oct. 12.—The Telegram says: "Disgusted with what he declares is nothing more than mob rule, Representative Edward H. O'Brien has repudiated the Democratic ticket headed by General Charles W. Bartlett, who was nominated Saturday at Springfield, after the most disgraceful tactics ever employed at a convention.

"What makes Mr. O'Brien's repudiation all the more remarkable is the fact that previous to the convention he was Worcester manager for the Bartlett campaign and worked hard at the caucuses in Wards 2, 3 and 4 for Bartlett delegations.

"At Springfield he was still active in his work for the Bartlett ticket, and was placed on many of the sub-committees by the Bartlett managers. It was through his influence that John A. Thayer was placed on the Bartlett ticket for Lieutenant-Governor.

"It was not until yesterday that Mr. O'Brien declared himself, and he did so in a manner that no one can mistake his meaning.

"Though it had been rumored that he was not in favor of the tactics adopted by the convention that nominated Bartlett, it was not until a petition indorsing Henry M. Whitney as the candidate for Governor on the Democratic citizen ticket was presented to him and he affixed his signature, did he make his first open declaration opposing the Bartlett ticket.

Representative O'Brien, when seen by a Telegram reporter, said:

"I became thoroughly disgusted with the mob rule carried out by the Bartlett managers at Springfield. I did not sign the petition because I was in favor of Whitney so much as to show that I am not in favor of bulldozing tactics. Every man has a right to make a clean, open fight, but this was not the case with the Bartlett people. I believe they had enough delegates to carry the convention without resorting to the disgraceful tactics.

"Bartlett has been greatly injured by the conduct of his managers, and if he should win out before the Ballot Law Commission he will not have the confidence of the people. While, on the other hand, Whitney has gained many votes, and if he runs will be a strong factor at the polls and stands an excellent chance of winning out. His chances are even better now than they were before the convention.

"I want to see harmony in the Democratic party, and the countenancing of such rowdyism as was seen at Springfield will only serve to disrupt the party. The Democrats should unite in repudiating the disgraceful actions, and the sooner they do it the better it will be for the party. I intend to work for the success of the party from now until election day."

Mr. O'Brien is the Democratic candidate for Senator from the Second Worcester senatorial district and a member-elect of the Democratic State Committee from the Second Ward.

1 DEAD, 2 IN HOSPITAL BY DEADLY GAS FUMES

One man is dead and two others are in the Lynn Hospital as a result of the mysterious opening of a gas jet in a stove in the cottage at 11 Libby place, Lynn, early to-day. The dead man, Salvatore Roco, was already beyond aid when neighbors, noticing the odor of gas, broke into the house.

Jack Roco, a brother of the dead man, and Matthew Bube were rescued in the nick of time, and physicians at the hospital say they have a fair chance to recover.

R. Roco and his wife rent the little cottage which is in one of the most thickly settled parts of the city of Lynn. Last night they retired, and Roco says that later the other three men came in and went to bed in a room adjoining the kitchen. Roco claims that all the gas jets had been closed before he and his wife went to bed, and thinks the one jet which caused his brother's death was opened by accident. How he does not know.

When neighbors noticed the smell of gas they broke down the doors to the cottage, pulled Salvatore and Jack Roco and Bube from their bed and carried them into the air. Then they aroused the couple sleeping upstairs. R. Roco and his wife were but slightly affected and recovered as soon as they reached the air. The police have accepted the explanation that the asphyxiation was accidental.

McNary's Testimony as to How Kiley Ruled Convention

"MR. Coakley moved that the election of temporary and permanent chairman and the nomination of a candidate for Governor be by roll call, but the motion was indefinitely postponed on motion of Mr. Kiley.

"I moved that two men be appointed to stand at each entrance of the convention hall, one representing each candidate. Mr. Kiley said the motion was out of order, and the chairman declared the report well taken. I appealed and was beaten, but the records don't show this."—Wiliam S. McNary's testimony before the Ballot Law Commission in the Bartlett-Whitney trial as to what happened at the meeting of the State Committee on the night before the convention.

BROWLEY IS BLAMED FOR CANAAN WRECK

NEW HAMPSHIRE RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS' REPORT CLEARS GREELEY.

CONCORD, N. H., Oct. 12.—Train Dispatcher J. A. Browley, of the Concord office of the Boston & Maine Railroad is held responsible by the State Railroad Commission for the wreck at West Canaan on September 16, in which twenty-six persons lost their lives. The commission's report, issued at noon to-day as the result of its recent investigation, finds that Browley made the mistake in sending out the message referring to train No. 30, when the dispatch should have said No. 34.

The inquiry seemed to narrow the responsibility to Browley and Station Master Greeley at West Canaan, who received the fatal message. This message was sent in proper form to White River Junction, but the record at West Canaan shows that it was received as No. 30. The report says:

"If under these circumstances he (Greeley) made the first mistake in writing '30,' as it was so written on the manifold blank, and Browley made his mistake in verifying. It is hardly conceivable that this was done by two men of their experience, and the record in the Concord office is strong evidence that the error did not originate at Canaan. It seems to us much more probable than otherwise that the dispatcher having at the bottom of the page in the record book an order annulling one as to signals previously sent on No. 30 carried No. 30 in his mind and telegraphed it in order No. 4 to Greeley inadvertently, and did not detect the error when the message was repeated by him."

CZAR NICHOLAS IN ANOTHER ACCIDENT

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 12.—A searching inquiry is in progress to determine responsibility for the stranding of a pinnace from the Emperial yacht while landing the Czar Nicholas yesterday. The pinnace sprung a leak following the crash upon the rock against which it struck and filled so rapidly that quick work was required to transfer Nicholas to another boat. The mishap has especial significance, coming so soon after the stranding of the monarch's yacht Sandardt.

stub, so as to identify himself in the convention."

"Procedure Unprecedented."

"Did you ever know of a case where tickets were issued to the delegates?" "To my best recollection tickets were only issued to spectators and guests who sat upon the platform. They were issued to the State Committeemen for seats on the platform. But never in my recollection has there been a general admission ticket which admitted spectators to the floor and permitted them to take part in the convention. It was the custom occasionally to use door checks, but these were given to delegates when they went out and taken up at the door when they returned."

"Then what would you say as to the method followed at the Springfield convention?" "I should say that the procedure adopted was both unusual and unprecedented."

"Mr. McNary," said Mr. Parker, "I want to question you with regard to the personnel of the committee on credentials, with reference to their declared preference as to the candidates for Governor; the committee as suggested by Mr. Kiley."

Mr. Mayberry objected and the question was changed as follows:

Protested to Feeney.

"Did you make any protest to Mr. Kiley or Mr. Feeney against the personnel of the committee on credentials, as the result of their known declaration for either candidate?" "Yes."

"What did you say?" "I told them that every man was a Bartlett man and that Mr. Whitney had no representation on that committee."

"You knew from the declaration of those men which candidate they favored?" "I did."

"Tell the commission the recognized duties of the committee on credentials." "The duty of that committee is to take the credentials from the doorkeepers or persons in charge, compare the same with the list properly made out, examine the credentials to see that they are properly signed, etc., hear any protest that may be made against any delegate or delegation, and to act on such contests and report to the convention. Or, in other words, this committee practically determines the composition of any convention."

"Tell us whether the contests such as you refer to were always heard by the Committee on Credentials." "In the old days the State Committee heard such contests, but since the change in the caucus law this has been done by the Committee on Credentials."

Admissions to Floor.

"Did you have any conversation with Mr. Feeney relative to admissions to the floor?" "Yes, the night before the convention I talked about the admission of State committeemen. A delegate from Greenfield asked Mr. Feeney in my presence what arrangements had been made for admission of the State Committee. Mr. Feeney said that there had been no arrangements and I said the rule had been to issue tickets to members of the State Committee, which allowed them seats on the platform. Mr. Feeney replied that there was no such rule and that he had no tickets for them."

"Previous to the convention had you any conversation with Mr. Feeney and Mr. Kiley with reference to the election of a temporary chairman?"

Protest to Feeney.

"Yes, on three occasions. The Tuesday before the convention I talked with Mr. Kiley and Mr. Feeney at Mr. Feeney's office. 'John,' I said, 'the Whitney people have empowered me to act for them in an attempt to agree with you on a temporary chairman and to make other arrangements for the convention. For that reason I came here, to see if we could agree.

"From various newspaper reports, I understand you want Kiley for chairman. The Whitney people object to that and suggest myself. You know we have a majority of the delegates and should, for that reason, control the make-up of the convention. Mr. Feeney said that he did not concede that we had a majority. However, he appeared inclined to compromise and wanted to know why Kiley was not acceptable. I told him the Whitney people had no confidence that he would be fair.

"I told him the Whitney people did not have confidence that he would be fair in all matters, and I said: 'You know me well enough to know that I will be fair in all matters. Anyway, the Whitney people will not agree to his election. We will go to a vote first.'

"The conversation becafe general and finally Feeney said: 'You know the objecion comes from Mayor Fitzgerald, don't you?' I said: 'It is not so; Fitzgerald has nothing to do with it. He has not been at any of our meetings, has not taken part at all and does not figure.'

Then he wanted to know what we would do about the committee. I asked him: "What committee, in particular?" Well, he spoke of the State Committee and said that they did not want some of their oldest members to retire, and we finally agreed on that: each to have nine members, and they to select their own man.

Finally he turned to me and said: "Whitney will not be the candidate; there is no use mincing these matters, because developments will occur that will take him out of the race entirely, and there is no use in our trying to arrange these things."

Whitney Won't Be Candidate.

"I asked him what he meant by the 'development?' He said: 'Never mind; they will occur, and Whitney won't be in the race at all.' I said: 'Do you mean Lawson? If you do, if that is the case I will disabuse your mind; because nothing that he may say or do will affect Mr. Whitney or take him out of the race. I know this to be a fact, from statements that he has made to be.'"

This was greeted by silence by Feeney and Kiley an dfinally I said, "Is that the case?" and getting no answer, finally agreed to let the matter drop, and take it up at a later date.

Q.—Now, did you have any subsequent conversation? A.—Yes, I telephoned him Wednesday afternoon, but he had gone home, and I took no further action until Friday. At that time I saw Feeney again with Kiley, and we talked over the same matter. Kiley insisted that he be made temporary chairman. He said that his name had appeared before the public, and that it would be injurious to him to be retired at this time. He said it would look as though he had been forced out. I assured him that I did not think so, to my mind, and that he had presided at conventions before, and told him that it was not a question of personal desire of either one of us, but that I would be satisfied if they could agree upon a third person.

INTENSE INTEREST IN LEGAL BATTLE

By Elias A. McQuaid.

Up to date the commission has heard little more than what each side claims that it is going to show.

In a word, the Whitney people allege fraud, collusion, conspiracy.

"We were on time when the convention was opened by Chairman Feeney of the State Committee." The Bartlett people make answer: "You were not. You were sore. You are still sore. And there is nothing more to your case."

The fight is expected to wax warmer as the fight advances. Thus far, to borrow an expression from the track, the legal jockeys have apparently been scoring. Now they have got the word. The race is on.

An interesting gathering, most of the bigwigs of the Democratic party in Massachusetts may be seen, the men you read about.

But there is no mixing. Almost as if signs of warning had been posted, the Whitney sympathizers flock to the east side of the room and the Bartlett people to the west. A great long table—the counsel table—divides the big room.

At the north end of the table sit the Commissioners, Chairman Henry V. Cunningham, Democrat; Sewall C. Brackett, Democrat, and Secretary Francis W. Estey, Republican, all lawyers and all Bostonians. Mr. Brackett, who has had a heavy cold, is just out of the house.

No Time Limit on Hearing.

"It is all nonsense," Chairman Cunningham declared to-day to the BOSTON AMERICAN, "to say that under the law this hearing must be concluded before 5 o'clock on Monday.

"We shall not waste any time, but we shall give to this vitally important matter all the time that may be necessary. On Monday at 5 o'clock expires the time within which 'nomination papers' may be filed. We have nothing to do with that.

"Our hearings may go on until the time comes when the Secretary of State must have all names which go on the ballot for use throughout the State—in other words, the State ticket.

"Every witness who has been summoned in the Bartlett-Whitney controversy, therefore, must be present at the hearings until they are concluded."

Regardless of all expenses, such as daily attendance of Sergeant-at-Arms Remington, Senate Doorkeeper Luke K. Davis and House Doorkeeper Tom Pedrick, with members of their staffs, the sixty-four witnesses, at $1.25 each per diem, stand the State about $80 a day.

George Fred Williams, Mr. Bryan's nearest friend in New England, chairman of the Committee on Resolutions in the Bartlett "convention," sits almost at the counsel table. Mr. Williams is in close touch and constant communication with former Mayor George L. Mayberry, of Waltham, the attorney of record on the Bartlett side.

With Mr. Mayberry are entered Lawyer Homer Albers, well known as the Lawson lawyer, and Harvey H. Pratt, of Scituate, nominee for Attorney-General on the Bartlett ticket.

Watson and His Green Bag.

It is noticed, however, that it is to George Fred Williams that Dan Kiley is constantly coming for whispered conferences. Williams is indisputably the big man on that side. Just back of him sits Jerry Watson, the young gentleman who ran the Kiley box office in the Court Square Theatre at Springfield, and, according to the Whitneyites, ran it with a high and mighty hand.

Watson is not a big man physically. He is pale. He has a mysterious green bag with him. The green bag contains the papers. Instinctively one feels like asking: "And the child?"

But the O'Connells, who ran the Bartlett campaign, who wrote the "stuff" for the newspapers and who made the Bartlett speeches—the O'Connells are sitting down away back. Everybody of prominence on the other side is still of prominence, but, suddenly, Williams, Kiley, Watson and others loom up in this battle before the Ballot Law Commission, while other Bartlett folks are in semi-retirement.

Three or four rows back from Mr. Williams and the Bartlett lawyers, most inconspicuous man in the room, is John P. Feeney, the youthful chairman of the Democratic State Committee, the man who surrendered the convention gavel to Kiley.

And over on the Whitney side are Herbert Parker, agile cross-examiner, and Malachi Jennings, said to know the election laws by heart. With them sits W. H. McClintock, the Springfield lawyer who got an injunction (which was never served) restraining Kiley et al. from going ahead with the "convention."

BACON PROVES HERO; RESCUES DROWNING MAN

Plunges From Launch Into the Charles to Save Helpless Harvard Sophomore.

Assistant Secretary of State Robert Bacon proved himself a hero by driving from the Harvard launch, John Harvard, into the chilly waters of the Charles river and rescuing a struggling and drowning Harvard Sophmore who was about to sink for the last time. With a graceful dive and lusty strokes Secretary Bacon quickly covered the thirty feet between the launch and the drowning student and before the party on board the launch had scarcely realized what was happening he was holding the sophomore's head above the water.

The rescue took place just after the practice row of the Harvard University crew. Secretary Bacon was visiting his sons who are prominent oarsmen at Harvard and watched the crew practice from the launch. As the crew passed through the Cottage Farm bridge on its way up stream the launch followed closely.

Canoe Overturns.

A canoe with two men was a little ahead. Coach Wray called to the Harvard crew to look out for the canoe and the men in the canoe then steered their craft to one side. Just as the launch was abreast of the canoe a sudden movement of one of the men overturned the frail craft. As they came up, one was seen clinging to the bottom of the canoe and the other was floundering helplessly a few feet away. It was evident that he was unable to swim. Secretary Bacon realized the peril of the man in the water. Quick as a flash he threw off his coat, balanced himself on the rail of the launch for one moment and then took a long slanting dive in the direction of the helpless sophomore.

Reid Helps in Rescue.

An instant later, J. S. Reid, a sophomore, who is trying for assistant manager of the crew, and who was on the launch, jumped into the river. Secretary Bacon was then nearing the drowning man and reached him just as he was going down for the last time. He seized and held him above water until Mr. Reid arrived, and with his assistance kept him safely until the launch was driven alongside of them. Both victims of the accident were taken aboard the launch and a hurry trip made back to the Newell boathouse for dry clothing for the swimmers.

Members of the Harvard crew say that Secretary Bacon's feat was one of the prttiest rescues ever seen on the river. His dive was as graceful and pretty as though he was merely taking a pleasure swim. Throughout all the affair he was the coolest man in the party. The registry book at the boathouse, where the canoe was hired showed that J. Nutting had registered for the canoe. No such name is in the Harvard directory.

HEIRESS BRIDE, WHO ELOPED, WED BEFORE?

Broker Declares He Married Oil King Maloney's Daughter Two Years Ago.

FATHER IS PROSTRATED

LONDON, Oct. 12.—According to the Daily Mail, the couple who arrived on board the steamer Empress of Ireland are believed to be Samuel Clarkson and his bride, Helen Maloney, daughter of Martin Maloney, the oil financier, and heiress to $25,000,000, whom he is alleged to have stolen.

The man who makes the charge that Miss Maloney was stolen from him is Arthur H. Osborne, a wealthy broker, now in New York, who says that he and Miss Maloney were secretly married two years ago while he was a student at Princeton.

Report Is Confirmed.

The couple boarded the steamer at Quebec at the last moment. They kept to their stateroom during the voyage and did not leave it until all the other passengers had landed at Liverpool, whence they traveled to London in a reserved compartment. They have gone to the continent.

The man is described as about twenty-seven years old, tall, fair and well built. The wife is a typical American girl, blonde and slender. The couple traveled under the name of "Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham."

The report of the marriage of Helen Maloney, daughter of Martin Maloney, to Samuel Clarkson at Montreal was confirmed yesterday.

At the same time Arthur H. Osborne, who lives at the Beresford, No. 1 West Eighty-first street, said that he and Miss Maloney had been married two years ago while he was at Princeton. According to Osborne he and the girl were married secretly at Mamaroneck, N. Y.

Marriage Kept Secret.

The marriage was kept secret with the idea that it would be made public when he had finished his course at Princeton. Osborne lives with his mother.

He said he knew that Clarkson had consulted a lawyer to find out if a marriage to Miss Maloney would be recognized in England, and was told that it would not be. Osborne says his marriage to Miss Maloney was not annulled.

The girl's father is so sick from worry that he has been taken to his brother's home in Philadelphia.

Osborne, who is now living in New York with his mother, formerly lived at No. 12 Austin street, Newtonville, Mass.

HARRIMAN SUIT IS POSTPONED

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—At the conference of counsel to-day, the government suit against E. H. Harriman and Otto H. Kahn, to force them to answer questions put to them before the Interstate Commerce Commission, was postponed by agreement and set for hearing on November 13 before Judge Hough in the United States District Court here.

The questions on which the contest will be made involve mainly the purchase of Illinois Central stock by the Union Pacific. The government seeks to show that the directors in effect sold the stock themselves, acting for the railroad.

HAIL BRIDES AT THREE SMART SET WEDDINGS

BRILLIANT CEREMONIES ARE WITNESSED BY LEADERS OF BOSTON SOCIETY.

With three equally smart weddings occuring at the same hour, to-day was a memorable one for Boston society.

Amy McMillan, Mary Richardson and Elsie Baron were the three brides to-day, all well known and popular in exclusive circles.

Miss McMillan was married to Sir John Lane Harrington, of London, British Ambassador to Abyssinia, at the McMillan Summer home, Eagle Head, at Manchester. Rev. Father Thomas I. Gasson, S. J., president of Boston College, performed the ceremony.

Miss Bacon and Joseph Lovering were wedded at St. John's Church, Jamaica Plain. A reception followed at the home of Assistant Secretary of State Robert Bacon.

GIRL STRIKERS ASK AID FROM LABOR UNIONS

Pretty Chocolate Dippers Confident of Winning Their "Fight For Rights."

BREAKERS ARE BEATEN

The pretty girl chocolate dippers who struck the F. W. Dow candy factory, Union street, a few days ago are still firm in their determination to stay out until the firm gives them "eight days' pay and a ten per cent. bonus" for a week's work.

The girls, although not unionized, have made a move in that direction and have already sought the aid of the Boston Central Labor Union officials for advice and it is likely that the young women will soon be organized.

The girls declare they will carry on a peaceful strike, but two breakers have already met with violence at the hands of the pretty strikers. The police are not taking any chances with the pretty maids, and a squad is on hand daily to keep peace, although they have had no call to do duty as yet.

The girls propose to carry the strike to other factories if they can form a union, and they figure in this way to get "their rights." They also point out the fact that this is the busiest season of the year, and they "good dippers are scarce."

HEARING ON HAU'S APPEAL BEGINS TO-DAY

Young Woman New Witness to Tell Story Clearing the American.

LEIPSIC, Germany, Oct. 12.—The hearing of the appeal of Carl Hau, the American lawyer, found guilty at Carlsruhe of murdering his mother-in-law, Frau Molito, and sentenced to death, began to-day before the Supreme Court of Germany.

Most important in the hearing will be the testimony of a young woman of Baden-Baden, the place the murder was committed, tending to clear Hau.

This witness, who had known Hau for a long time, says she saw the lawyer enter a cab and drive toward the railroad on the evening of November 6, the day of the murder. Just as he was driving away she heard the shot which killed Frau Molitor fired from a different direction. It would have been impossible, she says, for Hau to have fired the shots.

The p[illegible] are largely responsible for this important evidence being suppressed. When the young woman told them her story they actually dissuaded her from going to Court.

REFUSES TO DISCUSS TODD DISCOVERIES

Harvard Astronomer Not Ready to Indorse Views That Mars Is Inhabited.

THINKS CANALS NATURAL

While the views of Professor David Todd of Amherst, in regard to the planet Mars being inhabited are in line with those expressed by Professor Percival Lowell of this city, when he returned from his observatory at Flagstaff, Arizona, Professor Edward C. Pickering, head of Harvard Observatory, is not ready to indorse the opinions of the other two scientists.

Professor Lowell is at the present time carrying on further investigations in the West.

The Lowell expedition to South America, which Professor Todd headed, left New York last May. On the top of the Andes range in Peru, where the air is clearest, the planet Mars was studied while it was nearer to the earth than it has been in fifteen years.

Take 7,000 Photographs.

More than 7,000 photographs were taken by the party, twenty of which show the supposed double canals of the planet very distinctly.

Professor Pickering of Harvard has gone on record as stating that the canals were the work of nature and not of man, but he would not discuss Professor Todd's supposed discovery.

"I have always refrained from discussing the planet Mars and do not care to state now whether I believe it is inhabited or not," he said.

"Professor Todd may have made some wonderful discoveries, but until I know more about them I would not care to talk about them."

Mrs. Todd in Andes.

Mrs. Todd accompanied her husband on his trip to the Andes. They proceeded overland from Colon to Lima, and then had a rough journey up the mountain range.

During the Summer Mars was about 35,050,000 miles from the earth. A gigantic camera was used in the work.

This instrument is in the shape of a four-foot brass tube, to one end of which is attached an 18-inch telescope. The other end contains a shutter and a plate holder.

Professor Todd is now on his way to this country, and passed through Panama two days ago.

DAUNTLESS WRITER, LONG ILL, SUCCUMBS

Francis M. Iveagh, After Remarkable Career, Victim of Throat Trouble.

WAS ON AMERICAN STAFF

Francis Magennis Iveagh, formerly of the BOSTON AMERICAN staff, died at his home on East Springfield street of an affliction of the throat at an early hour to-day. He was a veteran newspaper man and had worked as editor and reporter on a number as editor and reporter on Boston newspapers.

Mr. Iveagh was the son of a British army officer and was born on the island of Malta, while his father's regiment was stationed there.

While a child, Mr. Iveagh travelled far and he lived and died a cosmopolite. At his best he was a brilliant writer and adept in most branches of his profession. He was game to the core.

He was one of the most extraordinary patients in the annals of Bellevue Hospital in New York, where he survived a bullet wound pronounced fatal as soon as he came into the hands of surgeons.

One night when he returned home from his post on a New York morning newspaper he was waylaid at the doorway by an Anarchist, who, without motive or reason, shot him through the lungs. Mr. Iveagh chased his assailant until he fell unconscious. But although surgeons despaired of his life Mr. Iveagh would not yield. He kept alive by sheer force of will and months afterwards reappeared on Park Row, weak and emaciated, but with grit no pain nor illness could daunt.

In his last illness the same spirit sustained him. He never complained nor whimpered as he gasped for breath. He was generous and kindly all his days and died at peace with God and man.

ART SCHOOL COMMITTEE IN SESSION

"Should Be Prepared for Occupancy Before Formal Opening," Says Eliot.

MEMBERS GET FIGURES

The educational committee appointed by the Finance Commission to consider the appropriation of half a million for additions to the Mechanics' Art High School, consisting of President Charles W. Eliot of Harvard, ex-President Henry S. Pritchett of Technology and Rev. Thomas I. Gasson, president of the Boston College, met at 10:15 a. m. to-day and considered briefly the matter presented. They will meet again at 9:30 a. m. on October 22.

Superintendent Stratton D. Brooks had submitted to the committee statistics bearing upon the school. Chairman R. Clipton Sturgis of the Schoolhouse Commission, was present to give all information. Each member of the committee was supplied with a cipy of everything relating to the question and would consider it for discussion at the next meeting. President Eliot said to-day:

"It was a great drawback when the school was opened because the building had not then been completed. It would be a drawback to hasten the construction of additions to the building this year.

"A school should be prepared for occupancy before a formal opening. I would not say what my personal impressions are concerning this proposed appropriation. It would not be courteous to the other members of the committee, and especially as no decision was reached to-day. But we are all deeply interested. The matter in hand will be thoroughly canvassed in the next few days."

FREE CONVICT IN PERKINS TRIAL

Joseph Fortunato, a convict at the House of Correction, who was arrested for perjury on the complaint of Alonzo Perkins, the former deputy master, because of certain facts testified to at the trial of Perkins for cruelty to prisoners, was freed to-day by the Grand Jury, who reported a "no bill" in his case.

The Grand Jury also failed to find an indictment against Aubrey A. Nelson, the chauffeur who run down and killed Joseph Stedman on September 13. The boy was the son of Dr. Stedman, of Jamaica Plain.

Life-Long Democrats and Republicans Take Up Battle for Hisgen

GERMAN CLUBS OF WESTERN PART OF STATE JOIN LABOR MEN IN CRY FOR OIL MAN.

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 12.—Assurances of support are reaching Thomas L. Hisgen, Independence League candidate for Governor, from unexpected quarters in the most gratifying manner.

The popular candidate has received letters that declare that the German vote of this section of the State will practically all be for Hisgen.

Invitations to visit all of the German clubs of Western Massachusetts have reached him. To-day he will visit Holyoke and in the evening pay a call to the Turn Verein in this city. Mr. Hisgen speaks German quite fluently, and will make addresses in that language.

Organized labor is also with Hisgen. L. W. E. Kimball of the Electrical Workers' Union in Boston is in this city connection with the work of his organization.

Mr. Kimball is a member of the Independence League and was on one of the importan committees at the Faneuil Hall convention. He is enthusiastic over Hisgen's increasing strength.

Hisgen's Record Spotless."

"You would be surprised," said Mr. Kimball, "to find how the working men are announcing quietly their determination to support the standard bearer of the league. I have heard the talk in every section where I have been. It came to me in a casual way. I am not making any effort to sound the men as to their preference.

"One thing has been found—there is no way in which they can make a successful attack on 'Tom' Hisgen. His record is spotless or as nearly so as an active business man's can be.

"Hisgen is going to poll a vote that will make some of the leaders of the old parties come out of the somnolent condition in which they have been existing for a few years. I feel certain that there will be an enormous silent vote for Hisgen this year. This will come from men who do not care to parade the fact that they are disgusted with the old moss back parties that have been manipulated for years by professional politicians."

Starts Tour Early Next Week.

Mr. Hisgen spent a good deal of his time yesterday preparing his letter of acceptance. It is believed that it will be a ringing document, in which he will come out squarely on all the questions that demand immediate consideration in this State.

There will be no equivocation on the merger question, it is said, and illuminating reasons may be looked for as to why he takes his stand against railroad monopoly.

Mr. Hisgen returned from a business trip to Albany last evening. He expects to start on his tour of the State the first of the week, and every city and town will be visited before the close of the campaign.

Calls for meetings have been received from all quarters. In some places—Pittsfield, for instance—the newspapers are controlled in such a manner that any news of Hisgen is being kept from the people.

Break Long-Standing Oaths.

The fighter against the Standard Oil Trust got a letter to this effect from Pittsfield yesterday. Before the end of the campaign one or more rousing meetings will be held in Pittsfield.

Many Republicans who have vowed that they would never vote the Democratic ticket, and many Democrats who have taken similar oaths relative to the Republican ticket are finding in Hisgen an excellent chance to get away from an environment that has begun to chafe them and still not violate their word.

One of the most prominent business men of Springfield, who has been prominent in Republican circles, met Mr. Hisgen on the street yesterday and this conversation took place:

Just One Instance.

"Hello, Tom, how is the campaign getting on?"

"Things are moving in a very promising manner," replied Hisgen.

"Well," said the man, "I could not vote the Democratic ticket—I have sworn never to vote for a Democrat, but I'm going to support you this year, and I know of others in exactly the same box."

"I feel very grateful," responded 'Tom' with a sunshiny smile.

"I'm tired of the Republican regime as it is carried on on Beacon Hill," added the man as he walked away.

Within half an hour another man, who is a friend of Hisgen and voted for him before, walked up to the blonde candidate. The two men chatted for a while and the Democratic convention in this city was alluded to.

One More Joins Throng.

"Oh, yes," said the man, "I wanted to tell you about my brother. You know what a rabid Democrat he's been. Well, he's quit them. He told me to-day that while he would never vote for a Republican that he was going to support you."

And that is the way things seem to have been going. Wherever genial "Tom" Hisgen goes he makes friends. When his itinerary brings him to Springfield he is assured of an enthusiastic welcome.

The general impression in this part of the State about the Democratic scramble is that both Whitney and Bartlett ought to resign and the Democratic ticket go into the field headless.

The battle looks more and more, as the feeling of the people is being learned, as though it would resolve itself into a dual contest between Guild and Hisgen.

Treat in Store for Opera Lovers.

In the evening the Indian Boys' Band gives a concert, Professor Robert Bruce is heard in several baritone selections, and Dr. J. D. Pickles, pastor of St. Paul's Church, also lectures.

Lovers of operatic music are to be given a rare treat the coming week, and hundreds will doubtless take advantage of this opportunity of hearing the United States Marine Band give the opera "Pocahontas," which will later be produced in Washington, D. C., by the daughters of that name in that city.

William H. Santelman, the leader of this band, is the composer, and Randolph Keim is the librettist. Mr. Keim is the only newspaper man that was with General Grant during his campaign, and, although he is a man over seventy years of age, he is one of the most active men in Washington.

One of the most interesting booths at the fair is that in charge of the Morgan Memorial Church. It shows the work which is being done by poor women employed by this church.

The factory where the work is done adjoins the church and is located on the corner of Shawmut avenue and Corning street.

"Shut in Day" at Fair.

In their exhibit the process of making rugs is shown and the rugs are for sale. The booth is located in the balcony of the Woman's Department.

Yesterday was "Shut in Day," and Miss Mary Hamilton Hadley of New Haven, spoke in the interests of the 1,700 members of this society throughout the country, while the Rev. Lyman Merrill, superintendent of the society discussed the work done by the men who belong.

Wife of Accused Doctor Says Arrest Is Mistake

Miss Hilda Erickson, pretty Swede girl, who is at the City Hospital, victim of doctor's alleged illegal treatment.

Miss Hilda Erickson, the pretty girl victim of a doctor's alleged illegal treatment, is still at the City Hospital in a serious condition, but the physicians there declare that they have hopes of her recovery.

The young woman was taken to the institution some days ago from the Swedish Girls' Home in Roxbury. Shortly after her arrival, it was discovered that the girl's life was in danger, and she told the attendants her story and they communicated with the police.

The police officials got on the trail of two men who, it is alleged, are responsible for her condition, Dr. Arthur S. Hudson of 210 Huntington avenue and Martin Holman, a foreman of a farm in Westwood.

Dr. Hudson is married, and lived with his wife and little boy at the Huntington avenue address. His wife is heartbroken over the arrest, and declares the police have made a mistake.

ROBERTS FEARS VERDICT; JURY REPORTS TO-DAY

Attorneys in Maine Murder Case File Closing Arguments With Fiery Words.

MRS. DICKINSON IN COURT

HOULTON, Me., Oct. 12.—Pacing up and down his narrow cell in the county jail here, Jack Roberts, guide and woodsman, stops at the sound of each passing footstep, waiting to hear the word that will either make him free to roam the fields and forests and open the door of his prison pen, in which he has been confined for nearly a year, or make him a prisoner for life in the dingy old building.

Roberts is charged with the murder of Ed Dickinson, a respected farmer of Smyrna Mills, a year ago, and the jury is this morning deciding his fate.

The case was brought to a close late yesterday afternoon, and the final arguments for accused and State were both filled with fiery remarks, Attorney Shaw, for Roberts, declaring that the whole accusation was empty, that the witnesses for the State had failed to prove a case, that the claim that Roberts wanted Mrs. Dickinson was false and had been proved so, and that the police were for the most part responsible for the man's varying statements.

Roberts Smiles at Praise.

On the other hand, General Hamlin was just as emphatic in his charges that Roberts was the man, and declared that he had told different stories from the time of the murder up to the present date.

Roberts was in the court and sat close to the rail, taking in every word of the rival lawyers. A faint smile spread over his features when Mr. Shaw spoke of his good qualities, but he again sank into a dreamy, apparently dazed, condition when Attorney Hamlin opened his plea.

Woman Guards Secret.

Mrs. Dickinson was the centre of all eyes. Her appearance at the trial has proved one of the puzzling features of the final hearing in the case.

It had been said that she would take the stand in behalf of Roberts, but outside of attending the trial daily since Monday, the little widow of the murdered man has refused to make known the object of her secret visit here.

At the first trial Mrs. Dickinson was also in court, jointly charged with Roberts, of the murder of her husband, but she was acquitted.

All Maine is to-day awaiting the jury verdict in what proved to be one of the strangest and most mysterious murder cases in the history of the State.

Who is the most beautiful American girl? Is she a Boston girl? Two pages of beauty pictures in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

SHE IS ANGRY OVER SNUB BY VANDERBILTS

Mrs. Norrie Gave Dinner For Gladys and the Count, but They Never Came.

JUST SENT AROUND A NOTE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 12.—The snub administered by Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, her daughter, Gladys and her fiance, Count Szechenyi, in failing to attend a dinner given on Wednesday night in honor of the young couple by Mrs. A. Lanfear Norrie, at her beautiful cottage, Midcliff, in Ruggles avenue, has caused great indignation on the part of Mrs. Norrie's friends.

Not a person of the twenty-one who attended the dinner, will, however, talk about it, but Mrs. Norrie feels keenly the position in which she was placed before her guests, and, in Newport language, is "mad through and through."

The dinner was to have begun at 7:30 p. m. Two hours before that time a curt note was delivered at the Norrie cottage which expressed regret at the inability of Mrs. Vanderbilt, Miss Gladys and the count to attend. There was no time to call the dinner off.

Gritted Her Teeth.

Mrs. Norrie is not the kind of a woman that gives way to tears, so she set her teeth hard, put on a smile and the gown her maid laid out, and welcomed her guests as they arrived. She told her guests that at 5 o'clock she had received a note from Mrs. Vanderbilt, formal in character, regretting the necessity of cancelling the engagement. Beyond the contents of the note she was in ignorance of any explanation of Mrs. Vanderbilt's conduct.

Behind the quiet dignity of Mrs. Norrie, however, there was resentment and it is said the guests partook of the indignation of the hostess. It was thought that, perhaps, Mrs. Vanderbilt would call up on the telephone and add some further explanation, but, it is said, she did not.

Count Was Forgotten.

Before the party broke up the absence of the Count and his fiancee was forgotten, and when the departing guests left Midcliff, they attested their gratitude and pleasure by a particularly warm squeeze of the hand of the hostess.

Since then, it is said, no word has come from the "The Breakers" in regard to the broken engagement, and by a strange coincidence most of the twenty-one persons invited to the Norrie dinner to meet the Count are invited to a dinner to-morrow night at "The Breakers."

The dinner to-morrow evening at The Breakers will be for forty-five guests and, it is said, will be a sort of family affair. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, the McKay Twomblys, Commodore and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt will be present. If Reginald Vanderbilt and his wife return from the Richmond, Va., horse show in time they, too, will attend, it is said.

MELLEN TO TALK TO PURDY ON MERGER.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 12.—After his consultation in Boston with Asa French, United States District Attorney, on the alleged illegality of the merger of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company with the Boston & Maine and other roads alleged to be competitors, M. A. Purdy, representative of the Federal Government, will have an interview with President Mellen. President Mellen has stated that he is ready to disclose absolutely all the facts.

$150,000 DAMAGE IN NEW YORK FIRE

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—One hundred and fifty thousand dollars damage was done by a fire which destroyed the six-story building at 176-180 Grand street early to-day. Nearly twenty manufacturing and commercial firms were burned out.

WOMAN FOUGHT FOR CAT; BITTEN BY DOG

Attacked by three dogs while she sought to defend her pet angora cat, Mrs. Leaty Ruhl, wife of United States Deputy Marshal James Ruhl, of No. 19 Beach road, Winthrop, was bitten by one of the dogs, and her hands and wrists were lacerated by scratches and bites of the cat. With her hands bleeding Mrs. Ruhl fell in a faint just as she was about to enter the home.

PLAN TO UNITE MERCHANTS FOR BETTER BOSTON

"Advancement of Commercial and Civic Interests" Aim of New Organization.

Prominent buinesss men of Boston are trying to form an organization which will include all engaged in trade in this city. The plan is to have in the membership all who belong to the Chamber of Commerce, the Board of Trade and the Merchants' Association. One aim is to employ experts to sutdy and report on questions affecting Boston's commercial interests.

It is denied that the men behind the project intend to use the new organization for political purposes and that it might be behind a citizens' candidate for Mayor.

The latest circular issued by the canvassing committee reads, in part:

"The project aims to unite by direct membership in one general body all those engaged in carrying on business in Greater Boston, the sole purpose of which body shall be to work for the advancement of the commercial and civic interests of the whole community. This body is to be so constituted that the best business men will find therein a field for public service so free from politics or any ulterior motives that they will willingly serve on its board of governors, and thus render to the community that service so much needed to preserve the traditions of the past and insure a wholesome condition for the future."

THE TREMONT TO STAY OPEN

No—the Tremont is not going to close.

Manager Schoeffel says it isn't, and here's what Business Manager Sheehan says of the story which has gained circulation this week:

"Theatrical enterprises, more than any other, seem to be especially selected by the insane individuals who go about in every community with their little hammers poised aloft, watching to strike a blow, however light or serious, so long as it strikes.

"You can make it as strong as you please," continued Mr. Sheehan, "that advanced vaudeville is to continue at the Tremont, and that Boston is to see entertainments in this phase of amusements of whose cost and artistic merits it has small idea, for there has been nothing in the theatrical history of this city by which to compare them. Advanced vaudeville is here to stay."

LUSITANIA CAN DO EVEN BETTER SAYS CAPTAIN

Officials Share Belief That Big Turbine Can Surpass New Ocean Record.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—That the Lusitania, Queen of the Seas, has yet a few more links of speed to let out is the confident belief of Captain Watt, who declares that the steamship is a "daisy" and capable of doing even better in the future. General Manager Brown of the Cunard line shares the confidence of the skipper that the vessel can do even better.

The reception that the giant turbine received at the hands of the officials of the Cunard Company, marine experts and the general public as she sailed up the bay in triumph yesterday was an acknowledgment that the champion of the seas had proven herself an unequivocal success.

That she is the speediest boat that rides the seven seas is now known. Her run from shore to shore in 4 days and 19 hours and 52 seconds is faster by five hours than the record made by any other boat, the average speed of 24 knots an hour is almost half a knot more than any ship has ever done before, and the highest number of nautical miles covered in a single hour, 24.76-100, was far faster than an ocean steamship has ever made on a regular run.

The public reception that the Lusitania received yesterday was naturally a mild one compared with her appearance here after her maiden voyage. Among steamship people, however, the exact figures were of the greatest interest, and Gustave Schwab, American manager of the North German Lloyd Line, which up to yesterday held the record of average miles per hour traveled across the Atlantic, by the Kaiser Wilhelm II., was quick to go to the office of the Cunard company and congratulate Vernon H. Brown and present him, as he termed it, with the Blue Ribbon of the Sea.

On the ship are several German engineers who have made copious notes, and even gone so far as to sketch the machinery. It is presumed that they are in the employ of the German government or the German steamship lines.

The Lusitania burned on the voyage nearly 1100 tons of Welsh navy coal a day.

FIND MARRIAGE ILLEGAL; SUIT COMES TO END

NEWBURYPORT, Oct. 12.—Although the woman in the case is dead, the alienation suit brought by Warren Mansfield of Swampscott against his old-time friend, John Cann of West Newbury, asking $10,000 damages, was fought in Superior Court yesterday, until it developed that the marriage between Mansfield and his wife, a former Mrs. Shaw, was illegal, because the necessary legal time between the date of her divorce and the date of her marriage to Mansfield, in Brooklyn, N. Y., did not elapse. The plaintiff was then nonsuited by the judge.

Pair Worked for Farmer.

Several summers ago John Cann, a farmer, left Lynn and came to West Newbury, where he purchased a farm from Representative S. F. Coffin. A short time afterward Warren Mansfield and his wife came to live with Cann, the wife to do housework.

Mansfield later left the house, while Mrs. Mansfield stayed there and did the housekeeping. Mansfield sued for alienation of his wife's affections, and a few months later, before the case had come into court, Mrs. Mansfield died.

Wed Too Soon After Divorce.

The climax of the case came yesterday when it was unearthed that Mrs. Mansfield, the dead woman, had been married to a man named Shaw in Pawtucket. It is alleged that she was divorced from Shaw and married to Mansfield in Brooklyn, N. Y., a short time later, and that the marriage was illegal, for the necessary time between the time of her last marriage and the date of her divorce was not sufficient to comply with the laws of Rhode Island.

Mansfield told the court that he had been married in Brooklyn, but had no idea that his marriage was illegal.

CHARGE SLAIN BABE'S PARENTS WITH MURDER

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 12.—Sarah McDonald and Patrick Edward McDonald are arraigned in court this morning on a charge of having slain their eleven-month-old baby boy, whose body was found concealed in a dress suit case in a yard off Hidden street on Tuesday last.

The woman was arrested in Worcester Thursday at the home of her sister, while the man gave himself up yesterday when he heard the police were looking for him. McDonald is said to belong in Fall River.

When the couple were brought together in the police chief's office, each sought to incriminate the other, the woman declaring that the man, with whom she has been living for a year or more and whose wife she had been called, had told her that he had made way with the child.

McDonald on the other hand, tells the authorities that the woman told him the child died in her arms, having received injuries by a fall against the stove.

The woman admits that she stole away from the house last Monday night and left the grip sack with its burden in the yard of Charles H. Pefferds' house on Hidden street. She declares, however, that she had nothing to do with the child's death.

MRS. CHADWICK LEFT A WILL

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 12.—The body of Mrs. Cassie Chadwick, who died at the Ohio Penitentiary last night, has been taken to Woodstock, Ont., the place of her birth, for burial. The body was accompanied by Emil Hoover, son of Mrs. Chadwick, and Mrs. J. W. Weston, a sister. Mrs. Chadwick left a will, but it is not likely that it will be probated. Her attorney said that she had no estate.

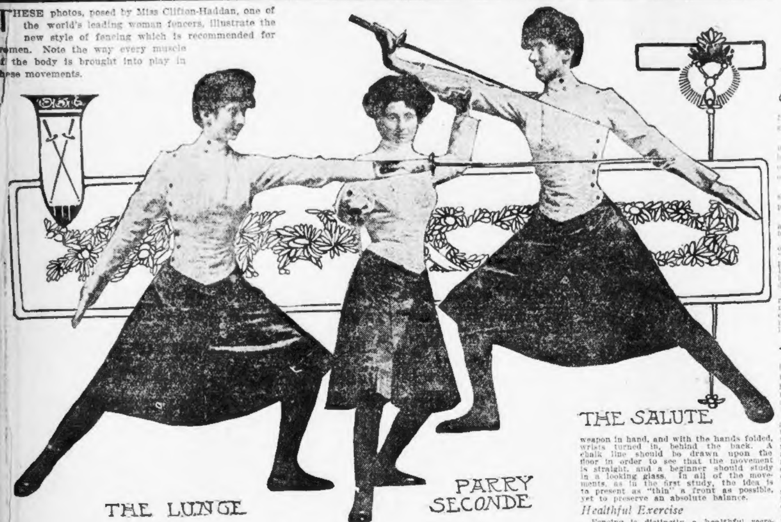
Mask and Foil Grow in Popularity in Boston Among the Athletically Inclined Girls

Fencing Ideal Sport for Women

THESE photos, posed by Miss Clifton-Haddan, one of the world's leading woman fencers, illustrate the new style of fencing which is recommended for women. Note the way every muscle of the body is brought into play in these movements.



WITH the approach of cold weather, when the athletic girl must turn from out-door to in-door sports, fencing appeals to scores of women as an ideal exercise.

As old as the sword, the science is ever ew, and indications are that the mask ad foil will be more popular than ever Boston the coming Winter. The numr of women devotees is said to be conantly on the increase.

An entirely new school of fencing has en adopted abroad and will doubtless on be taught in Boston. In the new ethod the right side only is presented to the opponent, giving as small a mark as possible. In the old school the fencer faced his opponent squarely.

Some New Ideas

The new ideas have been developed largely by Professor A. Rouleau of France. One of his cleverest pupils is Miss Clifton-Haddan, who made her debut three years ago at the international fencing tournament and is one of the most scientific women fencers in the world. She is the model for the poses accompanying this article.

The new posture is effected by pointing the left foot to the left and keeping it flat upon the ground. The right foot is pointed directly to the true front. The heels are together and the arms folded behind the back.

Both knees are then bent, the right foot being advanced to the front fourteen or sixteen inches, and the body balanced evenly over both feet. Next the right foot is advanced a similar distance and the left leg is straightened and braced.

Valuable Points

In moving forward the whole body to reach an adversary without drawing out of range, the right foot is advanced, the left following almost simultaneously. A counter move with the legs used in the same way gives the reverse.

These moves are executed without the weapon in hand, and with the hands folded, wrists turned in, behind the back. A chalk line should be drawn upon the floor in order to see that the movement is straight, and a beginner should study in a looking glass. In all of the movements, as in the first study, the idea is to present as "thin" a front as possible, yet to preserve an absolute balance.

Healthful Exercise

Fencing is distinctly a healthful recreation, and it gives a graceful and unconstrained deportment, and if pursued in moderation has beneficial effects for weak persons and those living a studious and sedentary life, as is attested by medical men of eminence. To public speakers it imparts an ease and freedom of gesture obtainable by no other exercise.

It leads to habits of self-command, and contributes to the discipline of the temper, besides cultivating bodily strength and activity.

In this art the muscles of every part of the body are brought into play. The chest is expanded, there is equal distribution of blood and other circulating fluids throughout the system, and affections of the lungs can be greatly ameliorated by occasional foil practice.

THE TURN OF THE BALANCE

A Thrilling Romance of American Life---By Brand Whitlock

"MR. JORDON, make you acquainted with Mr. Wales of the Courier."

"Glad to meet you, Mr. Jordon," said the newspaper man.

"Ah, chawmed, I'm suah," said Dean, keeping to the English accent he had just been using. "I say, won't you join us?"

Very Cordial

The bartender, at a glance from Dean, produced another bottle of champagne; the newspaper man's eyes glistened with pleasure.

Dean was taking out his cigarette case. Wales glanced at the cigarettes, and Dean hastened to proffer them.

In conversation with the reporter Dean impersonated an English follower of the turf who had brought some horses to America. As he did this, actor that he was, he became more and more interested in his impromptu monologue, assumed the character perfectly and lived into it, and the others there who knew of the deceit he was practising on the reporters—he was nearly always practising some sort of deceit, but seldom so innocently as now—were utterly delighted; they listened to his guying until nearly midnight, when Dean, having sustained the character of the Englishman for more than two hours, grew weary and said he must go. As he was leaving he said to the reporter:

"You've been across, of course? No? Well, really now, that's quite too bad, don't you know! But I say, whenever you come you must look me up, if you don't mind, at Tarlingham Tavern. I've a bit of a place down in the Surrey country; I've a beast here that's just about up to your weight. Have you ever ridden to the hounds?"

The reporter was delighted; he felt that a distinction had been conferred upon him. Wishing to show his appreciation, he asked Dean, or Jordon, as he was to him, if he might print an interview. Dean graciously consented, and the reporter left for his office, glad of a story with which to justify to his city editor, at least partly, his wasted evening.

When Dean had gone, taking his three companions with him, Gibbs and Mason sat for a long while in the back room.

"So that's Eddie Dean!" said Mason.

"Yes," said Gibbs, "that's him."

"And what's his graft?"

"Oh," said Gibbs, "the send, the bull con, the big mitt, the cross lift—anything in that line."

"And those two other guys with him?" asked Mason.

"That little one is Willie the Rat, the other is Gaffney."

"Sure-thing men, too?"

"Yes, they're in Ed's mob."

An Expert

Mason was still for a while, then he observed:

"Je's! He did make a monkey of that cove!"

Gibbs laughed. "Oh, he's a great cod! Why, do you know what he did once? Well, he went to Lord Paisley's ball in Quebec, impersonating Sir Charles Jordon—that's why I introduced him as Mr. Jordon to-night." Gibbs's eyes twinkled. "He went in to look for a rummy, but the flatties got on and tipped him off."

"He's smart."

"Yes, the smartest in the business. He's made several ten-century touches."

Gibbs thought seriously a moment and then said:

"No, he isn't smart; he's a damn fool, like all of them."

"Fall?"

"Yes, settled twice; done a two-spot at Joliet and a fliff at Ionia."

Mason knit his brows and thought a long time, while Gibbs smoked. Finally Mason shook his head.

"No," he said, "no, Dan, I don't get it. I can understand knocking off a peter—the stuff's right there. All you do is to go take it. I can understand a hold-up, or a heel, or a prowl; I can see how a gun reefs a britch kick and gets a poke—though I couldn't put my hand in a barrel myself and get it out again—without breaking the barrel. I haven't any use for that kind, which you know—but these sure-thing games, the big mitt and the bull con—no, Dan, I can't get hip."

Gibbs laughed.

"Well, I can't explain it, Joe. You heard him string that chump to-night?"

Mason dropped that phase of the question and promptly said:

"Dan, I suppose there's games higher up, ain't they?"

Gibbs laughed a superior laugh.

"Higher up? Joe, there's games that beat his just as much as his beat yours. I could name you men"—— Then he paused.

Mason had grown very solemn. He was not listening at all to Gibbs, and, after a moment or two, he looked up and said earnestly:

"Dan, what you said a while back is dead right. I'm a damn fool. Look at me now—I've done twenty years, and in all my time I've had less than two thousand bucks."

Plans of Future

Gibbs was about to speak, but Mason was too serious to let himself be interrupted.

"I was thinking it all over to-night and I decided—know what I decided?"

Gibbs shook his head.

"I decided," Mason went on, "to square it without waiting for the big touch." Gibbs was not impressed; the good thieves were always considering reformation. "I know I can't get anything to do—I'm too old, and, besides—well, you know." Mason let the situation speak for itself. "I'm about all in, but I was thinking, Dan, this here place you've got in the country, can't you"—Mason hesitated a little—"can't you let me work around there? Just my board and a few clothes?"

Mason leaned forward, eagerly.

"You know, Joe," said Gibbs, seeing that Mason was serious, "that as long as I've got a place you can have a home with me. I'm going to take Kate out there and live. I've got the place almost paid for."

Mason leaned back, tried to speak, paused, swallowed and moistened his lips.

"I worried about Slim to-night," he managed to say presently. It was hard for him to give utterance to thoughts that he considered sentimental. "My treating him so, you see—that I decided; I want to try it. That's why I wouldn't go with him; he didn't understand, but maybe I can explain. As I was thinking to-night, my head went off again—that stir simple, you know."

He raised his hand to his head and Gibbs was concerned.

"You'd better take a little drink, Joe," he said.

After Gibbs had brought the whiskey they sat there and discussed the future until the early Summer dawn was red.

SCARAB NECKLACE IN FAVOR

THE scarab has returned to popularity in the form of necklaces. They need not be genuine scarabs to be worn, for the imitations look just as well, and cost much less. A New York woman has recently purchased one of these, at a cost equalling that for diamonds or pearls. Her necklace is supposed to be of the sixteenth century construction. The pearls are set in a netting of Florentine gold.

HOW TO PUT ON YOUR GLOVES

THE thumb should be gently worked down until it is properly in place, which is with the seam coming directly down either side of the thumb.

* * *

Observe the gloved hands of women, and you will find that this is rarely the case. It is by no means uncommon to see the seam going directly across the thumb nail.

* * *

It is a good plan, before putting on new gloves, to adjust each finger separately, removing one before another is tried.

* * *

This gives each finger conformity to the shape of the future wearer, and there is no pulling or stretching out of shape.

* * *

This will stretch the material a trifle, and will obviate a tear or rip later.

* * *

Once properly in place the glove acquires a partial set. It can then be drawn off, and, after the fingers have been carefully adjusted, may be put on again.

* * *

Care should be taken to keep it from twisting the second time.

* * *

After gloves are put on twice the battle is practically won, though care should always be exercised in putting on gloves.

What's the Reason You Do Not Marry, Asks Dorothy Dix

By Dorothy Dix

PROBABLY all thinking people are agreed that men and women are happiest themselves and best do their duty by society when they marry, make a home and rear a family of children into being useful citizens.

The domestic life is the natural and normal one for humanity, and so the decline in matrimony becomes a matter of serious consideration for all who have the welfare of their country at heart.

Statistics and common observation alike show that matrimony is no longer the most popular of human institutions.

Young men do not look forward to the altar as the goal of ambitions and desires, but as something to escape if they can.

Girls do not dream of wedding rings, but of careers. The term "old bachelor" or "old maid" has ceased to be a term of reproach and become one of congratulation. It signifies no longer those who have missed bliss, but those who have achieved freedom.

Why is this? Why should there be this recent enormous slump in the matrimonial market? Has Cupid quit work and gone out on a strike? Is romance dead? Are men less gallant than of yore and maidens less desirable?

As Eternal as Life

Perish the thought! The passion of love is as eternal as life itself, and the one thing that never changes is the human heart. Its impulses, its emotions, its aspirations are the same to-day as they were a thousand years ago, and will be a thousand years hence.

Men were never more sensitive to beauty, and grace, and all the dear feminine charms than they are now, and women were never more lovable, so it is logically clear that the reason people do not marry as much as they used to is some other reason than mere caprice, and that the avowed preference for single blessedness is more or less of a bluff.

Still, the unanswered question: Why are so many modern men and women unmated? rises like Banquo's ghost, and will not down.

Of course, the flip and usual answer to the query is that the old bachelor didn't marry because he didn't want to, and the old maid never married because she had no chance to, but this is blatantly untrue.

Not every lonely old man, going his solitary way through the world, walks companionless because of choice, and there was never a woman so ugly or unattractive but what her ears have been gladdened at least once by the merry sound of the popping of the question.

Born Not to Be Mated

Undoubtedly there are both men and women who are born celibates. Nature made them old bachelors and old maids in the cradle. From infancy they exhibit a distrust and dislike of the opposite sex, and can see nothing in each other but marplots.

Such a boy finds a girl nothing but an incumbrance that interferes with games, and a mysterious and malign influence that takes away other boys from bird nesting and football and other enjoyable pastimes.

What anybody can see in one to make such a fuss over, passes his comprehension—silly little idiot, who is afraid of angle worms and dares not move lest she might fuss her frills. If he had been Adam, the Lord needn't have bothered about creating Eve. Then there would have been none of that apple-eating business.

To the girl of similar temperament the boy is no more attractive than she is to him. She regards him, and all his kind, as grubby little beasts, devised for the sole purpose of plaguing girls, mussing up things and gobbling the biggest piece of pie that she had fully intended to eat herself.

Instinctive Action

These sentiments are but slightly modified as they grow into manhood and womanhood. Each turns instinctively to his or her own kind, and mixed society has but few charms for them.

The born bachelor takes to clubs as a duck does to water, and he is strong on secret societies. In business he never hires a woman if he can help it, and when forced to deal with one he regards her suspiciously, as an enemy against whom it behooves him to be on his guard lest she capture him unawares.

The woman who is a predestined old maid likewise takes to clubs and societies of which the members are all of her own persuasion in gender.

She regards the appearance of mere man on earth as somewhat of an impertinence—a necessary one, perhaps, but still an impertinence—and her heart overflows with pity when she thinks of her unfortunate married sisters who have to put up with the faults and foibles of a husband.

Mankind interests her only as offering a field for her work as a reformer, and she bestows the excess of affection and sentiment with which every woman is endowed on some other woman.

Develop "Ways"

Moreover, and perhaps this is the crux of the whole situation, the old maid man and the girl bachelor both early develop "ways" that each instinctively knows that the other menaces.

Probably as many men and women have avoided matrimony for fear of having to give up some cherished habit as for any other reason.

I know one distinctly eligible man who frankly admits that the reason he has stayed single is because he was afraid that if he married his wife would move his slippers from the place on the mantel where he had nailed them, at precisely the distance from the fire and the angle at which he liked to have his feet when he lay back in his chair of an evening and smoked and read his paper with his feet elevated to a level with his head.

Undoubtedly this man has his fellow-sinners, and equally certainly there are plenty of women who are not drawn toward the holy bonds of matrimony because it is surrounded by a halo of tobacco smoke and accompanied by a boisterous creature who strews things about the house and can't be relied upon to wipe his feet on the mat and not track in dirt.

They Would Wed

If these men with "ways" could only marry another nice gentleman who could sympathize with them, and appreciate the esthetic effect of slippers nailed securely where you wanted them, so that you would not have to hunt for them, or shuffle around to get the right place to put them, they would joyfully become benedicts.

The women would also be glad to marry if they could espouse another lady who was willing to live on tea and toast, and realize the vital importance of always putting everything precisely in its appointed place, but as these arrangements are impossible, the born celibates hug their freedom, and matrimony languishes.

There are, however, very few born old bachelors and old maids, yet the unmarried are many and growing more numerous. Most people who have never married have some explanation other than lack of inclination for remaining single.

There must be reasons heroic, romantic, pathetic—reasons that deal with sentiment, with religion, with social and political conditions—behind every case of celibacy, and the AMERICAN invites all of its unmated readers to write to it and tell the real reason they have never married.

Boarding Houses to Form a Trust?

By Charles Somerville

THERE'S a peanut trust and a coffin trust, and the only thing in the world that the trusts did not have their clutches on is now a trust—the boarding house.

It is a Massachusetts trust. It has started in Springfield. The lean dames and the fat women that conduct prune parlors for the homeless in that city have combined.

There was a day in Springfield when you could get bacon and potatoes and amateur coffee and a big slab of pale pie for breakfast, and equally fine edibles for your other meals, and only pay $5 a week therefor. That day is past.

The Springfield Boarding House Trust has declared for a minimum rate of $6 a week. Pay, or go pruneless!

There was a large, enthusiastic convention of the keen-eyed, square-jawed "mothers" of the boarding houses. Some could not attend, but those all sent messages to say that they would do anything that the others did in the way of grinding down the poor hallroom boys.

There are rumors that the trust will soon pass beyond the realms of Massachusetts—shooting its oppressive tentacles beyond the land of pie and beans until it becomes a national affair.

What will the poor boarder do?

It is up to him to form a union—that's what it is up to him to do. No member of this union can remain in good standing who will accept hash more than twice a week. No member of the union will be allowed to hold his membership if he dallies with prunes every day in the week.

Butter has got to be good. It must not be wildly behaving butter. It must be docile, tame, mild butter.

This union will rule that landladies must not tell their boarders of what aristocrats they were in days gone by. All allusions to the family carriages that they used to have are barred.

That's the only weapon of defence the poor boarder has—a union.

On the other hand, think what the trust can do to the poor boarder who is too poor to pay! Think of the trust blacklist—think of the poor chap in ignominious flight from a boarding house—putting a brick in his valise when he throws it out the back window so that it will not be too light to fall—and taking a train for some distant city.

There, with ingratiating smile, he applies for accommodation, only to observe the stern-eyed landlady scanning a long blacklist, in which his unfortunate name appears. No prunes for him, poor lad.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

POOR SORT OF FRIEND

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady eighteen years of age. Last May I met a young man and was introduced to him by one of his friends. Now, after that evening, he came to see me instead of his friend, with my permission. His friend went away and did not know he was calling on me until he met us together one night. He did not say much, but acted very queer. I did not see or hear from him until I went to the country. We parted the best of friends. I heard from him regularly, and when I expected to come home wrote and told him he could meet me at the station, as he had asked if he might do so.

He did not do so. He was to come around Sunday evening and did not come. He sent a letter Monday and said he was out late Saturday night and was sick on Sunday, but would call up later in the day and explain everything. He did not. I did not hear or see him for two weeks. Come to find out he admitted to a friend of mine who took him to task about his actions that a gentleman friend of his had told him a slanderous story about me. When asked what it was he refused to tell. I have not heard anything of it since nor seen him either. I love him very dearly and I am almost breaking my heart to think of the way he has treated me. Don't you think if he thought as much of me as he said he did and wrote he did that he would have come forward and told me everything and given me a chance to rectify this most terrible accusation against myself? He also has a few things of mine that I only lent him. Is it not his place to return them? Also what do you think of the young man who told him such a story, and oh, please tell me what to do? I am almost distracted to think of such a gross injustice that has been done to me and I can't help myself.

GLADYS.

I DO not think much of a man who will listen to a slanderous story about a girl, and if I were you I would have nothing more to do with him. He should have gone straight to you and given you a chance to deny the accusations. He certainly should return anything of yours that is in his possession. The best thing for you to do is keep a dignified silence unless the stories are repeated. In that case get your father or brother or some friend to investigate them.

NO, YOU CANNOT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Will you kindly answer me this question? Can you call a woman who smokes a lady?

O. F.

A REALLY refined woman would not smoke. It is a very bad habit and one which every man disapproves of in a woman.

DON'TS FOR FAT WOMEN

DO not wear jet and avoid satin as if it were a pest. Never wear yellow. Don't pull the corset down in front, but in the back and hips, and let the front take care of itself. Black lace is a dress that the stout woman can always wear.

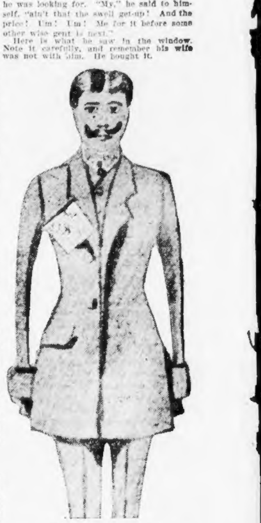
HOW A MAN SETS OUT TO BUY CLOTHES

THIS is a little story of a man who always picked out his own clothes. His wife couldn't get a word in edgewise. With lofty indifference he scorned her every suggestion. Also did he likewise treat the remarks of his female relatives, including his mother-in-law.

This year, as in years before, he spent hours rubbering at the windows of haberdasher and tailor. Finally he found what he was looking for. "My," he said to himself, "ain't that the swell get-up! And the price! Um! Um! Me for it before some other wise gent is next."

Here is what he saw in the window. Note it carefully, and remember his wife was not with him. He bought it.



This Is What He Saw.

Delighted by the suit, he desired to duplicate the entire outfit of the lay figure, and the obliging salesman accommodated him.

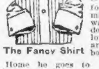
"Gee, but that's a stylish bonnet," said the man-who-went-out-shopping-without his wife. "It's a good enough looker for me. Say, but won't I be the hot baby!" and this was what he bought:

The Felt Hat.

"Now, sir," said the salesman, "I'll show you the finest line of collars in the world. They are all new and all good; take your pick." Here is what the lone shopper bought:

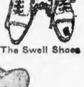
The New Collar

"Step this way for shirts!" chirped the cheery seller of goods. "Here's where you can't miss a perfect dream." And the man whose wife couldn't tell him anything about clothes picked out a real sassy shirt with cuffs attached, and here is what he bought:



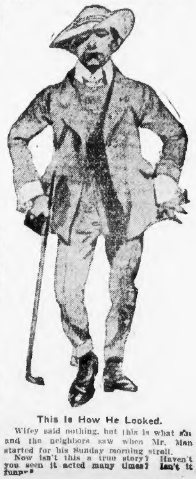
The Fancy Shirt

The next stop was in the shoe department, where mere man could have his choice of a lengthy line of shapes and styles, modest and loud, sensible and foolish. Did the salesman tell him what was what? Nothing doing. The poor fellow picked his own, and here is what he bought:



The Swell Shoes

Home he goes to wife, tosses his bundles on the table and says: "Wait till you see me togged up in these stylish goods of mine, wifey dear; I'll put your eye out for style, and also take several crimps in the pride of that person with the loud front who lives down stairs."



This Is How He Looked.

Wifey said nothing, but this is what she and the neighbors saw when Mr. Man started for his Sunday morning stroll.

Now isn't this a true story? Haven't you seen it acted many times? Isn't it funny?

CHICAGO GETS $600,000 MORE FROM JOHN D.

Makes Total of $6,517,000 Given to University by Him in Last Two Years.

TO TRIPLE FUTURE GIFTS

CHICAGO, Oct. 12.—The university of Chicago authorities have announced a new gift of $330,000 from John D. Rockefeller and the founder's promise to triple future donations to the William Rainy Harper memorial library fund to the amount of $90,000, making the aggregate of his latest benefaction $600,000.

The gift assures the erection of the library in honor of the late university president.

The $330,000 represents Mr. Rockefeller's addition to the $110,000 which has already been raised among the university's friends.

The oil king stipulates that his offer to triple gifts will not continue after April 1, 1908, but he will triple all amounts totaling not over $90,000 up to that time.

Dr. Thomas W. Goodspeed, registrar of the university and secretary of the board of trustees, declared that the memorial library would be planned to cost between $600,000 and $700,000 instead of $1,250,000 as at first intended.

The Rockefeller gift was announced to the board of trustees through John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who for several years has acted as his father's agent in his gifts to the school.

The $110,000 subscribed by the public in small amounts up to date has been secured through correspondence and from university students, alumni and trustees, and the university officials expect to raise the needed amount before the time limit expires.

Mr. Rockefeller's new gift increases the total amount he has given the university within the past two years to $6,517,000.

Girls Who Buy Titles Deserve What They Get Declares Hetty Green

HETTY GREEN SAYS:

An American workingman is a good enough husband for any girl.

If my son went to Europe to seek a title, I'd disown him.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—"I am glad Gladys Vanderbilt is not my daughter.

"There are thousands of honest young workingmen in the United States good enough to be any girl's husband.

"The girls who go to Europe to get their husbands deserve what they get—and more.

"If my son married a foreign woman because the union would bring him a title I would disown him."

These statements and many others were made yesterday to an AMERICAN reporter in a remarkable interview with Hetty Green, richest woman in the world, en route by train from New York to Newport.

The woman whose name is known the world over sat in a day coach—riding second class, with men who toil with their hands and who probably wouldn't know a bond from a check, but who, because they know how to wield a pickaxe well have the respect of the famous woman financier—and discussed, with remarkable vigor, marriage, divorce, finance, the condition of the country and touched slightly upon the notorious crimes of the traction trust.

Here is the interview:

"What do you think about the marriage of American girls to counts and petty princes, and dukes and lords of the Old World, Mrs. Green?"

Knows More About Discounts.

"Well," she replied, with a twinkle in her eye, "really, I know more about discounts than I do about counts."

Mrs. Green then made the remarks quoted above.

"I recently gave my son $5,000 with which to buy a new automobile, as a birthday gift," she continued, "but I stipulated that it should be of American make. That's how truly American I am, and I say this without egotism."

"The mother who will pay $5,000 for a title for her daughter should not expect to get a son-in-law of any account for the same sum. Further than this, the woman who will pay $5,000,000 for the son-in-law should have a guardian appointed to care for her.

"But, talking about myself, if you want to know, I am going to Newport for a few days of rest—to get away from business for a short time."

"Then you have not retired from business, as has been reported?" the reporter asked.

"When I get out of business," Mrs. Green responded, with a smile, "my work in this world shall have been done. You see, I have been busy forty-two years and work has made me young and happy."

"But, Mrs. Green," the interviewer queried, "have you not made all the money that you need, so that you may spend the remainder of your life in quietude and ease?"

Not Greedy for Money.

"It is not the money I am so greedy for," she responded. "It is happiness. We have to have money to be happy. When I found it necessary to go into business, to save what my father left me, I gave up all idea of ever seeing a social position.

"You know I am a Quaker and the Quakers have a saying that if you burn the candle both night and day it won't last. From that you can see why I have not gone in for society and business together."

"Now that you have reached an age when you can look back over a long period of life—a longer period than you can expect for the future—is the wealth that you have accummulated as satisfying as would be the social position that half your wealth could buy?" was asked.

"If I had not remained in business," said Mrs. Green, with a grim smile, yet a proud mien, "I would not have had the fun of whipping Collis P. Huntington, Joseph H. Choate and others of their clique."

REPORT FAVORS MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

Professor Frank Parsons, member of the National Civic Federation's commission on municipal ownership, says that contributions by corporations had no influence in shaping the report made after a study of conditions in this and other countries. It was testified in New York that the Metropolitan Securities Company had contributed $10,000 to commission expenses. Professor Parsons says that the inference that the commission was influenced by contributions grew out of misintrepretation of testimony taken in New York. He said, in part:

"A large part of the funds were contributed by various corporations and industrial interests, the Metropolitan company among the number, and August Belmont is quoted as saying that the result of the investigation was very satisfactory. Some newspaper man put these two facts together and concluded that the corporations had got what they expected and paid for.

"As a matter of fact, however, the report is strongly favorable to municipal ownership, and Mr. Belmont's remark meant merely that the work had been thoroughly done and a valuable mass of facts brought out. How far wrong is the impression that corporation contributions had any influence on the character of the results may be seen from the fact that the final resolutions of the commission, summing up the investigation, are signed by every municipal ownership member of the commission."

STRANGE GIRL USES TONGUE UNKNOWN HERE

Speaking a language that no one in Boston has been able to understand, a beautiful young girl is being cared for by Roxbury women for the police of the Roxbury Crossing station until her relatives can be found. The official interpreter at the police station, who knows seventeen languages and nearly thirty dialects of European countries, tried to question her, but was unable to understand a word she uttered.

He declares he never heard the tongue she speaks, but believes from certain intonations she is from one of the remote provinces of Lithuania. The beautiful stranger was found on Tremont street by Mrs. Mary E. Maxwell, wife of a policeman, and a woman companion. The strange girl's handsome face had attracted a crowd and she was standing afraid and tearful when the woman took her in charge. No one has been discovered who has ever seen the girl before.

MRS. GARDNER'S CABBAGES WIN

That Mrs. John L. Gardner, one of Boston's chief patrons of arts, is also a successful cabbage farmer, was shown at the annual vegetable show in Horticultural Hall. Her contribution to the tables comprises cabbages of both the drumhead and Savoy varieties, and in each she was awarded first prize.

The first prize for a collection of vegetables, not less than ten varieties, went to the New Hampshire College of Agriculture and the second to E. L. Lewis. The New Hampshire College took a dozen other prizes, either first or second, and a vote of thanks for improved new varieties of squashes.

Who is the most beautiful American girl? Is she a Boston girl? Two pages of beauty pictures in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

SQUIRRELS SET OFF FREE SHOW OF FIREWORKS

West Newton and Waltham Foks Enjoy Exhibit While Firemen Seek Blaze.

BIG STOREHOUSE BURNED

Gray squirrels nibbling at firecrackers, fulminate caps or some other Fourth of July explosive in the factory of the H. H. Tilton Fireworks Company in West Newton gave West Newton and Waltham people the finest free exhibition of set pieces, flower pots and other Fourth of July bric-a-brac they ever enjoyed, sent the fire departments of both towns tearing about the landscape in search of the trouble and caused about $7,000 worth of damage to the factory and supplies.

With "bombs bursting in air" and sky rockets whizzing across the sky, the firemen ran through strange roads and treacherous bogs and arrived on the West Newton side of the river in time to see the last bunch of Chinese bombs, roman candles and other spark makers go blazing a trail along the sky line. The spectators, meanwhile, were enjoying the exhibition.

The main storehouse of the factory was destroyed. The owner says it is partially covered by insurance. He thinks some fire-eating squirrels started the fire. A number of the gray variety had nests in the storehouse.

DETROIT, Oct. 12.—If the Cubs land the game here to-day they will win the world's championship and no further contests will be played.

The series now stands three to nothing in favor of the visitors, the only respectable showing made by the Tigers up to date being in the first game at Chicago, which ended in a twelve-inning tie, 3 to 3.

All hope is practically lost by the American Leaguers now. They have seen their star pitcher, "Wild Bill" Donovan, batted over the lot by the Cubs and lose his game by a score of 6 to 1, and that's enough to make the most hopeful team in the world submit to defeat.

"Wild Bill" Donovan was the lone hope of the Tigers. Largely because of his formidable record in the American League championship race, in which he won twenty-six games and only lost four, they expected him to wipe the earth with the Chicagoes. When Donovan pitched the "standstill" game in the Windy City, the local fans felt surer than ever that Bill would live up to expectations and give the Cubs the worst wallopings of their career.

Bill Met His Waterloo.

But such was not to be the case, however. Poor Bill met his Waterloo, and now all Tigerville is in gloom. While Bill was alive and well, there was some hope for the Detroits, but now that he has been voted a "dead one," the jig might as well be stopped.

So far the Tigers have looked very weak in comparison to their rivals from Chicago. All that snap and dash that marked the work of the Tigers during the American League season has vanished. One can hardly believe to look at the team playing that it is the same aggressive nine that Hugh Jennings led to such a remarkable victory.

There doesn't seem to be a bit of fight left in the Tigers. They act as though they have been attacked by a serious case of stage fright. They are as nervous as can be, and every time they come to the bat they shiver before the Cub's twirlers.

Cubs Fleet as Deer.

Quite a contrast to the work of the Tigers is the playing of the Cubs. They run bases as fleet as deer. They hit at the ball as though they were sure they could lace it out. In the field, they are doing all sorts of fine fielding stunts, and backing up the good work of the pitchers in approved style.

Like a beacon on a foggy night the catching of Johnny Kling, the Chicago catcher, stands out above all the rest. He is doing the finest playing behind the bat seen in a long time. Not only that, but he is hitting the ball, which makes his services invaluable.

"While there is life there is hope," is the sentiment of the Tigers. Although they have three defeats chalked up against them, with nary a victory, they still have some confidence that they will pull out victors despite the overwhelming odds.

Tigers in No Fighting Mood.

Jennings has been talking to his men every night, telling them that they are a better team than the Cubs and that hey can whip them if they will only put a little ginger in their play. But talk as Jennings will, he doesn't seem to be able to get the men in the fighting mood that so marked their playing all season.

There is keen disappointment everywhere in the playing of the Detroits. Outside of Chicago, the entire sympathy of the baseball public is with the Tigers. Fandom the country over expected the Americans to win, as they thought them a superior hitting bunch, as good in fielding, and faster on the bases. They also thought that Bill Donovan, who has made such a phenomenal showing this season, would be able to take at least two games from the Cubs. But alas! alas!

George Mullin will be sent to the rubber for the Tigers to-day. He made the best showing of any of the pitchers in the games up to date, with the possible exception of Donovan's work in the opening engagement. The big fellow is full of confidence that he can beat the Cubs, which, if he accomplishes, he will undoubtedly be given another shy at the Nationals at Chicago tomorrow, which game will be played if the Cubs fail to win to-day.

Umpires—Emslie and Connolly.

Two games at the Huntington avenue grounds this afternoon starting at 1.30 and then the curtain will be rung down on this season's baseball campaign.

The Doves and the Pilgrims, the two teams the Hub fans have supported so royally this year, will wind up the series of which the latter have already won five straight games, and the only thing of interest now that the brace of games holds for the home fans is a matter of a shut-out for the Doves. The Nationals are game and will keep hammering away till the final bell in a desperate effort to evade that intention of the Pilgrims to brush up the series by not allowing the Doves a single point.

The followers at the games who have ben rooting for the Doves when even there appeared a chance of them breaking through and downing the Pilgrims, may be able to get busy today, as Tenney will have his valuable pitchers ready in Flaherty and Dorner to uphold the prestige of the team, or, rather, gain some for it, as there is little left since the series started up.

Glaze, Burchell and Pruiett will have all they can handle to pitch as good ball as Dorner and Flaherty are sure to exhibit.

MAINE TITLE AT STAKE MONDAY

HAVERHILL, Oct. 12.—The members of the Haverhill Baseball and Athletic Club anticipate the best show of the season next Monday night when Bartley Connolly of Portland and Tom Sawyer of Rockland meet there in the main event of twelve rounds for the championship of Maine.

This pair are great rivals and each is anxious to show his superiority over the other. The bout will certainly be interesting, for they have furnished three of the hottest fistic arguments ever seen in Maine up to date. There is no loafing with Sawyer and Conolly in the ring, for each is trying all the time and a winner should be selected without any great difficulty by the referee.

BARRY HERE TOMORROW

Jim Barry, the Chicago heavyweight who is to meet Sam Langford in Chelsea Tuesday night, will be here tomorrow, and finish his training at the Chelsea Club. The Western boxer is now in good shape, and is confident that he will duplicate his fast work with Langford, which was so prominent in their bout at the Sharkey Athletic Club in New York nearly three weeks ago. Barry is a powerful hitter, and Langford says that no boxer ever hit him so hard as he was hit in that first round at the Sharkey Athletic Club.

Harvard's hardest game of the season up to date will be played in the Stadium at Cambridge this afternoon at 3 o'clock, when she meets the strong Williams eleven. A good opportunity will be furnished to gauge the strength of both Harvard's offence and defence.

There will be three changes from the Harvard line-up that started the game with Bates Wednesday. Forster will be at end in place of M. C. Pierce, who received a slight injury to his leg; Nourse will take Grant's place at centre, and Fish will have Hoar's position.

The Williams team is strong and the Williams undergraduates have shown their confidence in it by placing considerable money even on the game. Six of last year's veterans will be in their line-up and the team has also profited by some excellent new material.

The officials assigned by the central board for the game to-day are: Referee, Whiting of Cornell; umpire, Edwards of Princeton; field judge, Langford of Trinity. The time of the game will either be two 25-minute halves or the first period of 25 minutes and the second of 20.

None but the lightest kind of work was gone through yesterday afternoon. The regulars were merely given a short individual and technical drill, a few moments of signal practice, and then they were sent into the locker building.

ALCYELL, A CRIPPLE, HAS MADE A FINE RECORD

Racing luck is well illustrated in the instances of Blue Hill and Alcyell. Both of these trotters were trained this season at Readville, the first by Henry Titer and the other by Fred Hyde.

Blue Hill was counted by all as having every prospect of being the star three-year-old of the year. He was a very fast two-year-old, was sound, and in his work could trot a streak whenever asked. Titer left nothing undone in his handling of the colt. His miles were just right to bring him along in the finest possible condition for his big futurity engagements.

Well, at Readville he hit General Watts and made him go to the then world's record for three-year-old stallions. After the race Titer declared he never liked Blue Hill so well as he did in the next workout. But at Hartford he could not untrack himself, and was a big disappointment. Then he nearly had the distemper, and when that was gotten rid of it was found he was suffering from a curb. In this condition he caught the distance flag at Columbus and Lexington, Ky.

Now in the case of Alcyell he was unsound; in fact, had not been in shape to take the word for two years. Hyde landed in at Readville with the gelding, with only a faint idea that he would be able to get him to the races. Ever in Hyde's mind was the ailing "fin," so that clear up to August all Alcyell got was slow miles to strengthen his leg if possible, for the faster work he must receive later to race.

In one week Hyde worked him thirty-nine repeats and all in 2:40 and slower. Just before the Readville Grand Circuit meeting he was given a couple of miles around 2:10 and Hyde did not sleep for a week wondering how he would come out the next fast workout.

Won Thousands of Dollars.

Watch what the cripple did. He won two races at Columbus, beating the cream of the country in his class, and getting a record of 2:06¼, while Nick Hubinger, his owner, cashed in thousands of dollars from the pool box, as Alcyell sold for nearly nothing on the race.

And now after having declared all the season how Siliko was being headed for the classic Transylvania stake at Lexington his trainer, Knap McCarthy, says the winner of last year's Kentucky Futurity is to be saved for the big stakes through the circuit in 1908.

This season's star performers seems to run back to periods in their lives when plebeian work was their lot more than has ever been the instance in former years' when one fast trotter or pacer has been heralded through the press with his former menial history.

We have on the circuit now Belleo that pulled a butcher's wagon; R. F. D., who carried the mails over country roads, and the latest is Major Mallow, 2:05¼, which, it is stated, was formerly used as a family nag on a farm for the women folks to drive in hauling eggs and butter into market.

Started Funerals.

Starting Judge Newton has, too, come in for a drubbing in the poor starts he made down the circuit, but it was a noted driver who rung in the best one just as the horses were given the word all straggling. "Well, if that isn't the worst start ever," said a spectator.

"What do you expect?" asked the driver. "That is one of Newton's finest. Perhaps you don't know that he was educated to send the horses away one following another. For nine months in the year he is an undertaker in his home town."

LYNN RUNNER IN LONG RACE IN GOTHAM

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—John J. Daly, the Irish-American A. A. crack long-distance runner, is looked upon as the most probable winner of the ten-mile championship of the Amateur Athletic Union at the Polo grounds to-day. The Irish champion is in the pink of condition, and he may not only win but establish some new American records.

The famous stamping grounds of the Giants will be the scene of the greatest gathering of long-distance runners seen in this city in a long time, and the race promises to be a veritable treat.

The following is a full list of the entries: Otto A. Beranek, Townsend Harris Hall; Fred Lorz, Mohawk A. C.; E. Smith, Mohawk A. C.; E. H. White, Clarence E. Williams, Lynn, Mass.; John J. Gallagher, Jr., Philadelphia; Thomas S. Harris, Y. M. C. A.; Joan Lindquist, Svea A. & G. Club, New York; James Clark, Xavier A. A.; James D. McCherry, Xavier A. A.; Edward P. Carr, Xavier A. A.; H. M. Basson, Young Men's League; John J. Hayes, St. Bartholomew A. C.; Michael J. Ryan, St. Bartholomew A. C.; Winfield C. Bailey, New York A. C.; F. G. Bellars, New York A. C.; Leo Katzenstein, Northwestern A. C.; John J. Daly, Irish-American A. C.; W. Frank, Irish-American A. C.; W. Collins, Irish-American A. C.; S. Mellor, Mercury A. C.; T. P. Morrisey, Mercury A. C.

Daly won the senior five-mile championship at Jamestown a few weeks ago, and also won the national cross-country title in 1905. Gallagher has a great record as a distance man in Philadelphia. Collins won the junior and senior cross-country titles last year. Frank is a veteran at the game, and finished third in the famous Marathon race in Athens. Bellars, the New York A. C. man, won the Metropolitan three-mile event this year. Lorz and Carr are veterans of the game, and Katzenstein is a comer of great promise.

DAVE BARRY QUIT IN KAUFMAN GO

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 12.—With Dave Barry of Chicago on the floor taking the count for the fifth time in his bout here with Al Kaufman of San Francisco, the former's seconds threw up the sponge in the third round. The Windy City man was no match for his opponent and was given a terrible beating. Kaufman outweighed and towered above his rival, which counted largely in his favor.

SONOMA GIRL NOW CHAMPION

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 12.—Sonoma Girl, the favorite, won the famous Transylvania stake and clinched the championship for aged trotters for 1907. She had little trouble in defeating her field and at no time was the result in doubt. Margaret O., second choice in the betting, was distanced in the third heat.

NOVEL AUTO SPORTS AT NEWTON A. C. ON TO-DAY

BY J. C. KERRISON.

The expert motorists of this section are now ready for the trials of skill and dexterity which will form no small or unimportant feature of the second annual gymkhana meeting of the Bay State Automobile Association at the Newton Athletic grounds this afternoon. The events, seven in all, call for a display of management of cars unknown in track racing and, likewise, for an exhibition of ideas of speed and distance. The list of entries is a most satisfactory one, and some excellent work is anticipated. The scene of the hostilities being within easy reach of the city proper and the early start of the contests will permit of the spectators enjoying the full programme and returning to their respective homes in season for dinner.

This meeting will give more than one man an opportunity to settle accounts opened at previous gymkhana games, and the results will be awaited with interest. Young Milton Dodge, who performed so creditably with the White at the Newcastle gymkhana, has entered the arena against the older and more experienced men. Walter Schmunk, that clever operator of a White, is also entered, so that in a sense it will be steam against gasolene in more events than one. Rack Snow, R. R. Ross and J. B. McKenney have all elected to drive Peerless cars in the several events, while Lucius Tyler will once more handle the throttle of the little Maxwell. Arthur P. Underhill pins his faith on the air-cooled Knox, while Arthur Hinchcliffe is perfectly contented to send the Winton against all comers. Roy Dillinbeck will handle the throttle of the Austin, while Treasurer Harry Knights will display his sporting blood by driving his Pierce-Arrow, and Brother Arthur will handle the wheel of the Oldsmobile, with which he twice made the round trip from Boston to Keene and return on July 6. This shows that the competition will be keen. The officials of the meeting are: Referee, Lewis R. Speare; judges, J. C. Kerrison, C. E. Fay, A. P. Undergill, George W. McNear; starter, F. A. Hinchcliffe; clerk of course, Harry W. Knights; timers, A. A. Knight and George Lowe; scorer, Frank B. Crockett; assistant clerk of course, Lucius J. Tyler.

"In every race in which we have participated we have had but one object, the perfection of our cars. We have now reached the stage where the E. R. Thomas Motor Company can withdraw from circular track racing, but before it does I want to have our car take part in just one more contest, this time for sport and for the honor of America. I, accordingly, challenge the Renault and the Fiat to a single car, twenty-four hour race with the Thomas Flyer, and on its conclusion I will retire permanently from circular track racing as it is now conducted on tracks not suited for such events."

In this way, in quitting circular track contests, E. R. Thomas, maker of the Thomas cars, paves the way for a brilliant climax to the 1907 automobile racing season.

The conditions of the race and his reasons for the challenge are given by Mr. Thomas as follows:

First—The cars shall be the Thomas Flyer, which won the Brighton twenty-four-hour race, and established the record for that time for competition on a mile track; the Renault, which won the first Morris Park twenty-four-hour race and the Fiat that won the last one. These cars are representative of their countries; they have never been entered against each other and each has demonstrated that it is able to withstand the terrific strains of such a race.

Second—The track shall be the one best suited for track racing by automobiles, and its selection is to be in the hands of the representatives of the three cars.

"Accidents from racing on circular tracks," Mr. Thomas continues, "are caused by the entrance of too many cars, the entrance of cars that cannot stand the gruelling test of a long race of this kind, the recklessness of inexperienced drivers and the unpreparedness of the tracks. In this race none of these conditions would be present. But three cars are entered, they have each proven their stanchness by winning a hard contest of this kind, the drivers are old, experienced men and the track will be the best that can be found."

Notes of the Harness Horses

Surprises and disappointments are many in the few days that the Lexington meeting has been running, particularly regarding the New England owned or bred trotters. John Young unexpectedly saved the reputation of Massachusetts in the Futurity by getting second money with Bliss. Bonnie Way was considered worthy of getting a slice of the big prize, but, alas, for the other local entries of so great promise earlier in the season.

Walter Bates intends being right in the swim during the Fall matinees of the Dorchester Driving Club. He did well in the fairs with Binjolla, 2:17¾, and now has him and Welshman.

It is reported that J. W. L. is the property of Joseph E. Swendeman, chairman of the race committee of the Dorchesters. If such is the case, he has a good and improving trotter. He won many a blue ribbon for John W. Linnehan.

Who ever heard of Trampfast? Yet now he holds the world's race record of 2:12¼ for two-year-old trotters. The Leading Lady was backed to win, but her place was last instead in the summary. A local horseman remarked when she was sold by Benjamin Pope that, taken from the Readville trainer, Bob Proctor, it was a safe bet that she would not be heard of in the Kentucky event. Of course, there is always the chance for the "I told you so" prophet.

Once kite-shaped tracks were all the go, but the public soon wearied of seeing races over them. At White River Junction, Vt., it was found necessary to build a half-mile track for the fair, and the kite affair is used for jogging purposes.

It was the chestnut horse Sidney Carton, trial of 2:10, in "Long Shot" Coy's stable, owned by Frank X. Fitzpatrick of Cambridge, which dropped dead the other day.

Baron May, 2:11½, has turned out a good trotter for Millie Sayles, the North Attleboro trainer and driver. Those who saw him race declare he could have gotten a mark better than 2:10 had it been wanted.

The well-known turf correspondent, Everett L. Smith, has decided to locate in Boston. He has made arrangements to keep a few speedway trotters at Al Furbish's stable in Brighton.

Sam Hastings of West Medford is getting a price on a full brother of Johnny Smoker, 2:12½, which is said to have had a workout recently in 2:07¼. Hastings attempted to get out of the game last Spring in the Down East sale at Readville, but, in place of that, is now in heavier than ever.

George G. Hall of the Adams House is driving My Budd, 2:21¼, sire of Fanny P., 2:08¼, on the road. He has been gelded, and is one of the finest drivers in Greater Boston.

Sterling McKinney, 2:09¼, was sold at auction last Fall for $800, and his winnings this year has totalled up to more than $6,000, making him one of those rare buys.

W. T. Miller of Springfield has bought of the Glen Moore Farm, in New Jersey, a two-year-old full sister of Lake Queen, 2:08¼, for $1,000. Miller has owned Lake Queen through all her racing career, and hopes to get another equally as good on the turf.

The three-year-old pacing filly Betty Brent, 2:10¼, stepped a trial the other morning in 2:07 for Vance Nuckols, and if she didn't have to wear the hopples would be worth about twice as much for somebody to buy.

Kentucky, California, New York and Michigan are the only States that have produced more than one new 2:10 trotter this year, and the first three named produced more than all the rest of the country together. The New England States failed to produce a single new 2:10 trotter, and the Southern States only one. Last Spring at Readville it was easy to see any forenoon four or five being worked that gave promise of beating 2:10 a long ways, and the reason why they failed is in each instance a story.

Six of the get of Arion, 2:07¾, went into the charmed list in two days, while four two-year-olds by Peter the Great, 2:07¼, got marks better than 2:30 in one afternoon. Both of these stallions at one time were located at the Forbes farm in Ponkapoag.

PREDICT THAT COVE WILL WIN OVER DELMONT

Those who know the ability of Percy Cove, the Seattle featherweight, who boxes Al Delmont at the Cooper Club next Monday, freely predict that he will decisively defeat the Italian champion.

Cove has met such men as Louis Long, Kid Scaler and others heavier than himself and has always made good. He is tall and strong, and a lad who shines much better in a long bout than in a six-round affair.

The opening bout between Young Callahan of Roxbury against Young Chisholm of Everett will be speedy from the start.

In the other bout, Jack Flavin of Cambridge faces Tommy Rawson of East Boston.

Members who desire to witness the show must pay their assessments before 5 p. m. Monday, as positively no one but bona-fide members of the Cooper Club will be admitted. Applications for membership can be secured at the club office, 28 School street, Room 19.

THIS WOMAM FAST SWIMMER

A new world' swimming record for women at 200 yards was established a little more than a week ago by Miss Ethel Mackay of Glasgow, the champion woman swimmer of Scotland. The race took place at Burnley Baths, and it was the outcome of a match with Miss Maggie Scott, of Bacup, who was champion of England for 1903-05. Miss Mackay got the better of the start and soon was in the lead. At 100 yards she had an advantage of four yards, and this she improved to ten yards at the finish. The time was 2 minutes 57 1-5 seconds, beating the old record of 3 minutes 8 seconds.

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, OCTOBER 12, 1907

The Man Who Cries "Yellow Journalism"

Look to His Motives. He Has Something to Hide

One of the editors of this newspaper has in his desk several hundred recent clippings from newspapers printed in various parts of the State of Massachusetts, praising Eben S. Draper of Hopedale. These clippings present a singular unanimity of headlines and of subject matter. They are arranged in sets. One set is headed like this:

HOPEDALE'S INFLUENCE.

Public Spirit of Lieutenant-Governor Draper.

Another headline, which is identical in language in several dozen newspapers, reads as follows:

AN UP-TO-DATE TOWN.

Hopedale Noted for Its Magnificent Public Buildings and Public Parks.

A Real Democracy Where Employer and Employe Co-operate in Everything. That's for the Public Good.

The most popular of these headlines is this one:

RESENT ATTACKS.

Milford and Hopedale Object to Yellow Journalism.

Democratic Newspaper Calls to Mind Story of Ananias.

There are still other headlines, such as these:

ALWAYS TO THE FORE.

Hopedale Conspicuous In the Political as Well as the Business World.

General William F. Draper Elected to Congress While Lieutenant-Governor Draper Managed the Memorable Campaign of 1892.

Also:

HOPEDALE'S ACTIVE WORKERS.

The Drapers Have Figured Prominently on All Great Public Questions.

After Several Defeats, Republican Party Reorganized Under Leadership of Lieutenant-Governor Draper.

And this one:

THEIR ONE PURPOSE.

Aim of the Drapers to Master Practical Side of Every Undertaking.

Lieutenant-Governor Draper a Man With a Practical Training for a Successful Business Career.

These headlines appeared almost simultaneously in dozens of newspapers. The matter under each of the respective headlines was identical in the various newspapers. In a few scattered cases the matter as printed in these newspapers was marked in small type at the end—Adv. In most cases, however, they were printed without any advertising marks whatever.

No person of intelligence believes that these articles were printed simultaneously in all parts of the State because the editors of the various newspapers, actuated by a common impulse, decided that this was the right kind of editorial or news matter to print in their papers.

An examination of the clippings in possession of the AMERICAN leaves no doubt of the fact that these supposed expressions of opinion by newspapers throughout the State were PAID FOR BY EBEN S. DRAPER.

The great mass of these clippings which has come into the AMERICAN office shows that Mr. Draper has spent hundreds and thousands of dollars for the purpose of influencing the opinion of the public as to the town of Hopedale, of which he is the principal owner.

In most of these editorial and "news" articles, paid for with Mr. Draper's money, the BOSTON AMERICAN and the Hearst newspapers are attacked and are accused of "yellow journalism."

We are proud of this charge coming from Mr. Draper through the medium of a PURCHASED PRESS. Every attack on the ground of "yellow journalism" from such a source is a tribute to the character of the AMERICAN. We want no better praise.

If the journalism of the AMERICAN, which has told the truth about Mr. Draper's war on trades unions, is to be classified as "yellow," what color shall be ascribed to the journalism that sells its political opinions to any man who has the money to buy them, and that palms off such stuff upon its readers as the honest product of its own office?

Mr. Draper is in poor company when he cries "yellow journalism." The criminal, the crook, or the grafter, exposed by a newspaper and brought to justice, invariably makes the same cry.

The plain fact about Mr. Draper is that he OWNS a town in which no man who belongs to a LABOR UNION is permitted to live.

American citizens are deprived there of the right to exercise their own will in such matters. Mr. Draper can't deny it; IT'S SO.

Other crimes may be condoned in Hopedale, but not the crime of suggesting to fellow workmen the advantage of organizing for the common good. THAT crime—if discovered, which it usually is—means BANISHMENT. It means that the man who commits it is DEPRIVED OF HIS MEANS OF LIVELIHOOD.

There is no trial, no public hearing. The offender simply loses his job and must look elsewhere for work by which to earn money to support himself and his wife and children.

Draper's rule is as absolute in Hopedale as the Czar's in Russia.

There are men in this State who APPROVE of these conditions. Such men will vote for Eben S. Draper for Lieutenant-Governor.

There are others who believe that such conditions are UN-American and that the man who is responsible for them should not be elected to a place from which in another year he may be elevated to the position of Governor of Massachusetts.

SUCH men will vote to DEFEAT Eben S. Draper, and they won't be diverted from their purpose by any bought-and-paid-for clamor against "yellow journalism."

Can Hisgen Be Elected?

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I congratulate you on Mr. Newberry's excellent cartoon in yesterday's AMERICAN. I have never voted. I shall vote this year for the first time. I had intended voting the Democratic ticket, but the rank, riotous tactics of the present campaign do not appeal to me. The spectacle of a man prizefighting his way into the highest office of the State is even more disgusting than the slick, cut-and-dried methods of the Republican party.

I shall vote for Hisgen and his ticket, but he will never be elected. No honest candidate can win, for the simple reason that if the present administration were defeated and replaced by a just one the 10,000 professional politicians, the jackals of the Republican party and the Trusts, would be compelled to earn an honest living, instead of padding the payrolls of wire-pulling corporations. And honest bread-winning is distasteful and degrading to men who have lived by what political influence they could wield.

Guild will be elected. Lodge says so, and his power is supreme—now. But the Independence League is growing, and when the honest but misled voters get the cobwebs rubbed out of their eyes it will govern the city, the State and the nation.

Boston. WALTER W. WRIGHT.

[Our correspondent may be mistaken in saying Hisgen will not win. Stranger things have happened. The election of Moran as District Attorney two years ago was as surprising as the election of Hisgen would be this Fall. If every man who feels as Mr. Wright does will vote as Mr. Wright intends to vote Mr. Hisgen will be elected.]—Ed. BOSTON AMERICAN.

Prosperity

By Wex Jones

"I'VE seen better days"—the stranger began,
And the prosperous guy edged away—
"Five-thirty—I promised to meet a man,
And I'll miss him sure if I stay."

"I've seen better days"—as he stood by the bar,
Said the shabby-dressed stranger then;
Said the prosperous guy, "It's coming, my car,
And I'm blowed if I miss it again."

"What's up?" asked the stranger, looking about,
"I guess that fat guy isn't sober—
But, as I was saying before he went out,
I've seen better days for October."

Patience in Adversity

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

THE world is well lost when the world is wrong,
No matter how men deride you;
For if you are patient, and firm and strong,
You will find in time (though the time be long)
That the world wheels 'round beside you.

If you dare to sail first o'er a new thought track,
For a while it will scourge and score you;
Then coming abreast with skilful tack,
It will clasp your hand and slap your back,
And vow it was there before you.

The world means well, though it wander and stray
From the straight, short cut to duty;
So go ahead in that path, I say;
For after a while it will come your way,
Bringing its pleasures and beauty.

The Babies' Hotel

By Winifred Black

AND now there's a hotel for babies only.

It's in London, where the accents come from.

It's very smart and very exclusive and very expensive. You can't get your baby into it unless you belong to the upper six or seven, and you mustn't even think of sending your little boy or girl there if you aren't willing to pay a large and enthusiastic amount of money for the privilege.

Well, there are some advantages in being poor, sometimes, aren't there?

The hotel is a magnificent affair, furnished in the very latest hygienic fashion; the nurses are all trained nurses and the playthings are all made of ivory and silver and other hygienic compositions.

The babies are fed by the clock, put to sleep by the clock, amused by the clock—I wonder if they are loved by the clock, too?

The hotel is full all the time, they say, and there is a large waiting list of babies whose parents want to leave them there while they go abroad to live in India or Africa or some other place where babies are not particularly welcome.

And What Next!

DEAR me, who would have thought England, slow, old, conservative England, would get so far ahead of us? We haven't a thing like the Babies' Hotel in our country, not a thing.

We have to pretend to like our own babies here, and go through the nuisance of trying to make people believe that we would be so miserable if we were separated for long from the funny little round-faced gurgling things that we couldn't live at all.

A mother is just about as happy away from her baby as a sweetheart is when he puts the sea between him and the girl he loves.

Suppose we open a hotel for sweethearts, nobody eligible but girls who are desperately in love; wouldn't that be a shining success of a plan?

A babies' hotel—dear heart, when will we open a mothers' hotel or a fathers' refuge?

Is it possible that there are human beings in this world who are so artificial and so absolutely twisted out of all decent feeling that the simple, natural ties of life have no hold whatever upon them?

The babies' hotel—what sort of women do you raise in England? Oh, London, centre of the world's civilization, that such a monstrous institution can grow and flourish there!

I'd like to go down into the slums of any American city and ask the women there to give me their babies to send to a babies' hotel. It would be rather interesting to hear the answers I would get—but I would take good care to have as escort a stalwart policeman with me when I dared suggest such an idea.

I'm afraid I would need protection.

How About Mothers?

A BABIES' hotel—why, what are the mothers of these babies made of? Little bits of thread and tinsel and kindling wood and wire, or human flesh and blood?

What do they do, these women who send their babies to the babies' hotel to get rid of them, when they wake up in the gray dawn, just as the first rosy gleam of day looks into the window, and finds them lying with their arms—empty?

How do they pass the babies they see in the streets? I should think every little face that nods to them from even the humblest baby carriage would bring a sudden tightening of the heart that would almost amount to suffocation.

The babies' hotel! Poor little, lonely, neglected, unwanted creatures! I'd rather be the baby of the poorest washwoman in Boston and have a soap box for a cradle, an old flannel blanket for my best dress and the fire escape for my piazza, than to be one of these poor little creatures who lives at the babies' hotel for a hundred dollars a week, wouldn't you?
